Martin, Good furnish New Holland champs

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

NEW HOLLAND — Narvon 4-H'er Ron Martin, closed out his 4-H career in style, Thursday, at the 1982 New Holland Fair Baby Beef Show.

The 17-year-old Martin piloted, "Dutch," his 1,235 pound Charolais steer to a grand championship, his first such win at the New Holland festival. Martin, the son of Charles and Joyce Martin, earlier captured the heavyweight title in the three-class event.

Show judge Henry Gruber went with his lightweight champ for reserve grand champion. Fourteen-year-old Sharon Martin made the reserve trip to the winner's circle with her 1,160 pound Hereford x Simmental steer. No stranger to rosettes and ribbons, Sharon, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Martin of East Earl, exhibited another reserve grand champion steer in 1980.

Gruber then put the 4-H'ers Scotch combs to work and came up with his grand champion fitter. Janae Martin of New Holland paraded her Angus steer to the fitting championship, while Ephrata 4-H'ers Emily and Fred Weaver captured the top showing honors in the senior and junior division, respectively.

In the hog barn, Kenton Good, 10, of Fivepointville collected Grand Champion market hog honors with his 265-pound Hampshire-cross gilt. Kenton is the son of Ezra Good.

New Holland 4-H'er Jim Martin, 15, followed with reserve with his 241-pound Duroc-cross barrow.

Gruber, who also judged the hog show, went with Scott Bailey of Blue Ball for senior champion fitter and showman. Douglas Hertzog of Ephrata got the nod for junior champion showman, while Sean Bailey of Blue Ball collected junior champion fitter honors.

Later that day, the champions as well as all show participants vied for top bid in the sale of champions.

Ron Martin's grand champion steer commanded a high $3.10 per

API dairymen get cash advance

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

LANCASTER — In the midst of all the gloom and doom clouding up today's dairy industry, a few thousands producers in the northeast recently snagged a piece of the proverbial silver lining.

Atlantic Processing, Inc., a three-member milk marketing federation is going out in 1982 with a profitable flourish and appropriately shared the good fortune with dairy producers from Lehigh Valley Farmers, Inter-State Milk Producer's Cooperative and Mount Joy Farmers Cooperative Association.

"We've had a pretty decent year thus far and thought it would be appropriate to make an advance dividend payment before our fiscal year ends," explained Bart Patten API vice president of finances.

Consequently, the approximately 5,000 producers eligible for the advance will receive or already have received their share of $300,000.

Of that sum, approximately $200,000 will be divided by Lehigh Valley Farmers members, $80,000 moves into Inter-State pockets and about $19,000 will be paid to the Mount Joy members.

The amount each member receives is based on his or her 6-month milk production multiplied by 5.5 cents per hundredweight. According to LVF and Mount Joy officials, the average advance ranges from $180 to $200 per producer.

Future dividends will be determined by the API board of directors after the financial statements are completed at the end of the fiscal year, which is January 31, 1983.

Patten listed a number of factors which contributed to API's success.

"We've acquired a couple ice cream plants and the ice cream business turned the corner," he noted.

"At our milk plants, our volume has remained steady," he continued. "We've been relatively unaffected by the recession."

Bill Stout, LVF vice president and general manager applauded API for its "aggressiveness in advertising and promoting of products such as Lact-Aid and Quick."

Quick, explained Stout, is a flavored dairy drink manufactured by Nestles. Unlike it's powdered counterpart, which has been on store shelves for decades, the newer Nestles product arrives already mixed and in liquid form.

In the wake of the new product, Stout reported, regular chocolate milk sales have increased.

"The Quick sales are all new business," Stout affirmed.

The cash advance, although always welcome, may be just a pleasant memory by December 1, 1982, the day that marks the end of U.S. Agriculture Secretary John Block's 45-day "public comment" period for the Administration's price support program.

But more importantly, that first Wednesday in December kicks off the Administration's 50-cent per hundredweight assessment on all milk marketed.

The support price of $13.10 per hundredweight will be in effect for 1983 and 1984 fiscal years. Beginning October 1, 1984, however, the support would be set at the percentage of parity which $13.10 represented on October 1, 1983.

USDA officials explain that the 50-cent assessment will help offset support program costs and will remain in place until the estimated CCC annual purchases fall below 5 billion pounds.

In addition, the Secretary is further authorized to assess an additional 50-cent penalty on April 1, 1983 if projected CCC purchases exceed 7.5 billion pounds.

If Block complies with the second 50-cent assessment, he must institute a refund for dairy producers who have reduced their production below a certain percentage of the base period chosen by the Secretary from two options — the fiscal year starting October 1, 1982 or the average of the two fiscal years beginning August 1, 1980.

The percentage set by the Secretary cannot be greater than the national average surplus. No refund program is authorized for the first assessment.

Farmers battle threat from NFO

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

BEDFORD — More than 35 Bedford County farmers have received letters from a Harrisburg law firm representing the National Farmers' Organization charging that they pay more than $900 each in unpaid back dues. At least three farmers received letters indicating a suit would be filed should they refuse to pay the debt.

One such recipient, Mrs. Ethel Ford, wife of a Bedford County farmer, says that they have been served the notice even though they have been out of contact with the nationwide farmers' lobby and marketing service for more than 10 years — neither receiving benefits nor services from the NFO during this time. Since 1968, she says she repeatedly requested the organization to cancel her membership.

However, according to a copy of the membership agreement the law firm mailed to her with the collection notice, "(the agreement and authorization) shall be automatically renewed and shall be irrevocable for successive periods of three years each unless written notice is given by (the member) to the NFO not more than twenty days and not less than ten days prior to the expiration of each three-year period."

Though she admits that her notices may not have been mailed within these framed time periods, Mrs. Ford says she and more than 30 farmers who received the same notice feel they have cause for a court fight if necessary.

And attorneys for the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association's Legal Service Plan agree with this belief. In a letter to state Attorney General Leroy Zimmerman, PFA attorney Louis Glantz requested an investigation into the NFO collection notices and alluded to the possibilities of launching counter suits against NFO, seeking $5,000 in damages for each violation of the debt collection laws.

In the Sept. 18, 1981 letter, Glantz stated that the collection letters violated the Pennsylvania Debt Collection Trade Practice Rules by "falsely representing character, amount or legal status of these debts since the Statute of Limitations would clearly bar any legal enforcement of these debts even if they were owed."

Because the organization has been inactive in the county since the early 1970s, Mrs. Ford, joined by Bedford County farmers Fred Crissey of R1 Manns Choice and Mrs. Floyd Ritchey of R3 Everett, feel they have cause for a court fight and therefore are trying to organize all farmers involved in the dispute.

Until 1970, NFO dues were $5 per year plus a $20 initial membership fee. After 1970, however, dues increased. Bedford County farmers say they were never notified of an increase in dues, and because they had no contact with the NFO, assumed they were no longer members.

Crissey recently stated that during an organizational meeting in 1968, farmers were told that NFO would work for higher prices for the farmers' produce and would lobby for federal legislation. This meeting was the only one the county NFO chapter ever had, according to Crissey.

In a recent phone conversation with Lancaster Farming, PFA attorney Glantz indicated there is a "three-fold" argument these Pennsylvania farmers could use in their own defense. First is the Statute of Limitations he mentioned in his letter to the attorney general. According to Glantz,

EARLY-BIRD PENS

HOW has the EARLYBIRD idea been going over? Several months ago when we first started the idea we got 10 cows in the pen; this week we had 40! They always sell good. This week the premium was $3.00 per CWT! Your support tells us you like the IDEA.

To get your cows in the EARLYBIRD Pen, they must arrive here by 2:00 P.M.; so plan now to haul in early or call your trucker for an early pick-up for your cows and hogs.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

OCT. 4-10, 1982
Chilblains, moon wanes.

Scallop season now . . . Wendell Willkie died Oct. 8, 1944. . . Last quarter of the moon Oct. 9 (Sat.). . . Average length of days for the week, 11 hours, 28 minutes. . . Grantland Rice broadcast first World Series Oct. 6, 1921. . . First boat with "Gold Rushers" left New York for California Oct. 6, 1848. . . You can't hold a man down without staying down with him.

Ask the Old Farmer: My husband ordered a lovely bread box made of pine for me at Christmas. Unfortunately, I cannot use the box because the varnish smell is picked up by the bread. I have tried all I know of to get rid of that varnish smell and have failed. Can you think of something that will help? D.H., Marietta, Ga.

Place a cup of uncooked coffee in the bread box and leave it closed overnight. Throw away the coffee afterwards. Or try wiping the inside of the box with pure extract of vanilla. Scrub it well, then wash off and rinse.

Home Hints: Rubbing alcohol will remove ink stains.

Off the Sounding Board

By Sheila Miller, Editor

Battle of the bullheads

As if things weren't bad enough in the farming community, here's a situation that should make all of us stop short in our tracks and look twice to make sure our eyes aren't playing tricks on us.

I'm referring to the front page story in this week's Lancaster Farming in which writer Debbie Koontz reports on the humiliating case of farm organization against farmer against farm organization.

Although this might sound redundant, as you read Debbie's story, you will find this strangest of agricultural stories has three main characters. The powerful antagonist, in this case the farm organization known as the National Farmers Organization. The naive, unaware victim, which is played so well by unsuspecting farmers in Bedford County who were shocked and dismayed to find themselves being confronted by NFO's attorneys. And then there's the hapless white knight, the Don Quixote of this drama, played by Pennsylvania Farmers' Association.

As the plot unfolds, we find the two farm organizations in a raging war, with both farm representatives firing letters out of typewriters as fast as they can, defending their flanks from each others onslaughts and covering their trails. Both trying to be the victor, regardless of how many farmers lie crushed and trampled in the aftermath.

Like Don Quixote, perhaps PFA was too quick to see dragons in NFO's actions. It turns out that the fine-printed contracts signed by farmers who joined NFO provided a rather unreasonable but effective screen for the organization. And now NFO has sent letters to Pennsylvania farmers demanding payment of unpaid dues, even though they weren't active in Bedford County since the 1970s. So the dragons PFA chased were legitimate windmills. NFO had cleverly intertwined words to make their contracts binding, even though the unfortunate farmers thought their contracts had become extinct with age.

But, what's most disturbing about this entire court battle is the ridiculousness of what is happening within the farming community. One organization that claims it has the best interests of farmers in mind, and advocates programs for controlling markets so that farmers aren't exploited by business, now in its turn is exploiting the farmers it says it represents.

What farmer has his attorney review every application for membership into a farm organization that's filled out, most times out in the barn? Unfortunately, it seems that when dealing with NFO, it probably is a good idea.

It's quite understandable how this misunderstanding occurred, but why should it? NFO says this sort of "accounts receivable" status for membership dues is not unusual. Shouldn't that point out there is a problem in communications between their organization and farmer members? Or, is this a convenient communications gap that is ignored — renewal reminders in the form of attorneys' letters aren't mailed out until it's profitable to cash in on delinquent farmers at a time when the farm economy is at rock bottom.

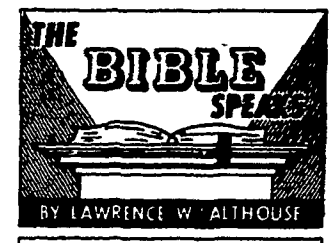
And although it is commendable for PFA to look out for the interests of its members, even when it concerns another farm organization, how does it look to have farm group fighting farm group? There are enough adversaries outside of the farm community to fight, groups that threaten agriculture's existence. This infighting doesn't make sense.

Could it be a battle for sovereignty? Who's king of Ag Hill?

No, that would be too childish..

So, while the battle continues to wage, and the anger among the affected farmers smolders and begins to glow red-hot, the farm community needs to keep watch over this festering problem.

Farmers have always prided themselves on honesty — except for an occasional horse trade or two. But now it seems double-talk and double-dealing has infiltrated the farm ranks. As a result farmers and farm organizations' credibilities continue to slide into the mire, falling prey to legal entanglements and confusion. It is certainly a shame for two farm organizations who could do so much good for their membership to clash and tear each other apart, while numbed victims look on and await the outcome.



WHEN SPIRITS ARE BROKEN
October 3, 1982

Background Scripture: Exodus 3:1 through 6:13.
Devotional Reading: Exodus 1:1-14.

The headline in yesterday's newspaper were shocking: five people in a neighboring city were found murdered in their adjoining homes!

This morning's edition added to the story, reporting that a man in his late twenties had been arrested by the police for the crime. But it was the story in an adjoining column that moved me even more deeply: the parents of the accused acknowledging that their son is mentally ill, that he needs help; but, despite al their efforts, they had not been able to secure any help for him. How terrible, cried the father, that it took a horrible crime to get the attention of the authorities!

Broken Spirit, Cruel Bondage

I couldn't help putting myself in their place. How often they must have prayed to God to ask for help for their troubled son! How many times they must have wept and asked God to save their boy from the darkness within him! According to the family, their son had first gone astray when, in high school, he had gotten into drugs. How often they must have prayed for Christ to heal him of his addiction! If, this evening, they are wondering about the value of their prayers for their son, if they are questioning the goodness and love of God, can any of us blame them?

Of course, it seems wonderful to be able to say that we never have any doubts like that, that we never raise such questions. But, when our spirits are broken and we suffer cruel bondage, is it not most human for us to rebel within the depths of our own souls?

One of the reasons I love the Bible is that it is not afraid to tell us about the outspoken doubts and complaints of its most revered figures. For example, consider Moses' complaint to the Lord "O Lord, why has thou done evil to this people? Why didst thou ever send me? For since I came to Pharaoh to speak in thy name, he has done evil to this people, and thou hast not delivered thy people." The sharpness and audacity of his words cause us to wince: is this not blasphemy? Is it not a sin against God?

But The Lord Said...

The answer to those questions seem to appear in the manner in which God responds to these audacious words: "But the Lord said to Moses, 'Now you shall see what I will do to Pharaoh...'" Please note that there is no outrage in God's words, no recriminations against Moses' complaints. Instead of reacting in anger or offense, God simply tries to help Moses to continue to trust in his love and care.

I am convinced that the real blasphemy against God is to maintain a never-faltering faith in him without ever questioning or challenging him. To do so, it seems to me, is to deny his existance, to act as if our God and his promises to us are not important enough for us to take seriously. When spirits are broken, I'm sure God expects and intends for us to complain and question. For it is in communicating these feelings to him, that we open the channels through which must flow the compassion and tender love to heal us of our brokeness and bondage.

TO PREPARE FOR WHEAT PLANTING

Wheat is an important crop in our farming program with over 30,000 acres raised in the county last year. The Hessian Fly is always a consideration on planting dates. If you are planning to seed Abe or Auburn you don't need to be concerned with the "Fly Free" date since they are both resistant varieties. You can seed Abe and Auburn around the first of October. Redroad, Hart and Tyler on the other hand are susceptible to the new race of Hessian Fly, so that means they should not be planted until after the first killing frost or after the Fly-Free date of Oct. 10.

The fly larvae causes injury by damaging the stem tissue. This weakens the stem and the grain will lodge. The Hessian Fly is one of the most destructive insect pests on wheat in our state.

Just a couple reminders on planting wheat — it should not be planted in the same field more often than once every 5 years. Plow the field as early as possible and disc and harrow to kill as many weeds as possible. It's also a good idea to harrow the field the day of seeding.

TO WATCH FOR UNWANTED GUESTS

Now that the weather is getting cooler you may find some unwanted guests in your barn and home. You won't see them too often perhaps, but they're there. These guests will destroy more food and property then they eat. The guests in question are rats and mice.

It's estimated that a hundred million rats cost Americans a billion dollars a year. That is ten dollars a rat.

Rats thrive in areas where grains lie on the ground, where trash and garbage cans lie around, and where trash piles exist. Rats not only spoil foods; they kill small animals and chickens. They also carry diseases to men and animals.

Cold weather causes rats to migrate indoors. I would suggest that you destroy rat foods and feeding places. To keep pests out, rat-proofing buildings may be necessary. Bait stations can also be constructed. They should be made so that pets and children cannot come in contact with the bait.

TO PROTECT PLANTS FOR THE WINTER

Plants with shallow roots such as azaleas, rhododendrons, mountain laurel and flowering dogwood need frequent waterings. And it's a good idea to continue watering these plants on a regular basis until the ground freezes this fall.

A shallow-rooted plant has most of its root system in the upper three to five inches of soil. Since this is the first layer of soil to dry out, it's very important that these plants receive at least an inch of

Real-life drama

This is a true story, about an incident which happened to me in 1979. Fortunately all I sustained was a blackened eye, broken eye glasses and a cold from wading through ice water.

December 18 was a cold snowy day in Lackawanna County. Having no skirting around our house trailer, we decided to haul about 100 bales of "old hay" from a storage barn on the next road to block the open underside.

Upon completing the wagon loading, the tractor refused to start. Ralph and I got a neighbor to run us home, and Ralph went back with a truck to bring the hay wagon. We decided to tow the tractor home the next morning.

December 19, I got my infant daughter to sleep and I wrapped up good for the towing job awaiting us. Ralph and I took the "pay loader," a large highway type machine, and logging chain back to the disabled tractor. I'm an experienced field operator, and have driven a tractor and "towed" someone else, but never handled the "towed" end of such a deal.

Ralph got the chain secured, and told me, "just steer and relax." The tractor was a big old Minneapolis Moline - and very solid. Everything was going great, and we were in sight of our trailer, right near our neighbors stone wall - when I realized the tractor was going too fast.

I tried to hit the brakes but they weren't catching. I stood on both clutch and brakes - and tried to nose the tractor to bump the back of the "payloader." I started screaming at Ralph but the engine drowned me out, so he couldn't hear me.

All of a sudden the front of the Moline was parallel to the back wheel of the "payloader". Then the chain broke, snapping the left tie rod. The tractor went across the road, through a wire fence, and I saw the stone wall coming.

I held on to the steering wheel, figuring the wall would stop the tractor. Next thing I knew, I was going through the meadow, toward our neighbor's pond. From the angle I was traveling I could see the road and Ralph. He was standing next to the payloader - waving his arms - yelling. But I could not hear him with two hats and a scarf on.

The next thing I knew, the tractor had broken through the ice and come to a stop mired in the soft mud pond bottom. Somewhere my glasses had fallen off and something had hit me pretty hard in the eye adn cheek. I could taste blood as it ran down my face from a cut under my left eye.

By that time Ralph had run the quarter mile from the road to the pond. He looked like he was scared half to death. I was shaking but managed to joke about it. "The tractor needed a good washing," I said. Then I started crying, realizing I could have been killed, leaving my husband and 5 month old daughter to fend for themselves.

I had to wade through broken ice and 3 feet of water to shore. And we went home.

It took a heavy duty towing rig four hours to haul the tractor out and back to the farm.

We didn't talk much about the accident. I was willing to, but Ralph didn't care to be reminded. I learned several months later, when with his mother one day that Ralph's father and grandfather had been killed in a single accident. A tractor "ran away" throwing the grandfather off to die from a skull fracture, then flipping over and crushing his father when Ralph was a little boy.

Since then I've been on a tractor occasionally but I always feel a bit queasy until its back in the shed and the engine is off. We've learned that "saving money" by trying to tow a disabled tractor "costs" money.

The towing company would have charged us $25 for the towing from the hay barn to the home farm. Instead it cost $125 plus the cost to repair the tie rod and dry out the engine, a trip to the doctor for cold medicine, an eye examination and new eye glasses.

I feel this may alert others to a "real" drama that is all too common today. Farming is a way of life, and there's risks. But the risks should be through "nature", not man-made.

Better image

As a reader of Lancaster Farming, I found in the Sept. 25 issue of Off the Sounding Board something that I would appreciate if you would also explain — that not only do we need "better image" efforts on the farmer-end, but likewise on the other end.

Taking over my parents farm in 1927 and adding a few small tracts as we went along, we experienced several of these happenings that left a bitter taste.

On one occasion, a macadam road was built along our property where there was a sharp turn in the old roadbed. I was approached by the men in charge that the curve should be made easier with the proposed new road and if I agreed to give up 25 feet of ground this could be done. So we discussed the matter and decided I donate the 25 feet with the promise that they provide decent access to my field the coming growing season when machinery had to be moved across this road under construction. But when the time came, I had many problems and the curve was sloped with only the road traffic in mind.

On another occasion, a road was built; and, with fields on both sides, I was told not to cross with machinery for a period of days. It happened to be spraying season with my water supply on one side and a crop to be sprayed on the other.

I had a problem. So finally I offered to sell them the growing crop and let it be their concern, which of course they were not interested. So I told them if my schedule called for spray, I would go across — which I did. And after the job was done I could show them where they did more damage to the newly built road with their own equipment than I did with mine.

On another occasion, the power company asked for a right of way to place a guy wire 20 feet in my field which I refused to sign, showing them where a similar construction was built in our area and no guy wire was placed in the field.

Their answer to that was it would increase the cost of construction. But I would not sign the release. So the line was built and still stands after many years.

One could go on including the trash thrown into fields and the tires of farm machines hit and many times damaged.

So I think this explains what property owners are faced with after paying taxes for generations. My parents started early in the century.

I say let's realize that farmers are human beings and should be treated as such.

Five winners

After reading the headline on page B30 of the Sept. 11 issue of Lancaster Farming, I think you should be aware of the total Md. Farm Queen contest. There were 23 girls who vied for Md. Farm Queen title and not 5.

Each county in Md. has a separate contest and those individual winners compete for the state title. Five finalists won at the Md. Farm Queen contest; Jane Lynch, queen; Anne McGinnis, first runner-up; Susan Flanigan, second runner-up; Brenda Bourne, third runner-up; and Susan Sasscer, fourth runner-up.

Thank you for your many informative articles. We are a very happy subscriber to your newspaper.

water each week throughout the season.

Also, the more water your plants can take up before the ground freezes, the better they will withstand the severe winter conditions. Keep in mind that once the ground does freeze, there will be no free water for the plants to take up. But even though the ground is frozen, the parts of the plant above the ground will continue to lose water.

TO STORE PUMPKINS AND SQUASH

At the end of the harvest season, there is an ample supply of pumpkins and squash. Crop quality of these vine crops is better than in recent years due to favorable growing conditions. Fruit rots prior to harvest were at a minimum. Well matured specimens resulted, observed Arnold G. Lueck, Extension Horticultural Agent.

The hard-shelled squash such as the Hubbards and Table Queen may keep for 3 to 6 months in storage. The knob-end Butternuts would have a shorter time.

Pumpkin varieties vary considerably in how long they will keep. Such soft-skinned varieties like Connecticut Field and the Cushaws have a short storage life, less than 2 months.

The best storage temperature for pumpkins and winter squash is from 50 to 55 degrees with a relative humidity of about 70 to 75 percent. A garage floor or enclosed porch will usually provide such conditions.

Report supplied by USDA

Compared to previous weeks close, Slaughter Steers and Heifers ended the week .50-1.00 lower. Cows 1.50-2.50 higher. Bulls 1.00-1.50 higher.

Prices trended lower for the third consecutive week, closing at the lowest levels since December 1981. Declines of 2.00-3.00 in the carcass beef trade forced buyers to constantly reduce bids and market tone at the close was very bearish. Yield grade continued to be the key factor in bid determination, as YG 4 carcasses still beset by broad discounts in the beef trade. Aside from the increased percentage of YG 4, however, the weeks supply proved rather attractive, with dressing percentages and quality grades running above average.

Steers comprised 36 pct of week's receipts, Heifers 28 pct., Cows 6 pct., Feeders 29 pct. Four day receipts 10103; week ago 9528; year ago 9861.

Slaughter Steers mostly steady for the week after selling higher in active trading on Monday and then lower on Wednesday under light demand. Slaughter Heifers steady to .50 lower. This Well-Built Manure Tanker Spreads An Excellent Pattern On Your Fields

Because this well-built manure tanker from US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania shoots the discharge slurry up, and baffles the spread down, you get an even coverage pattern on your fields. Better than most makes and models, we think.

In addition, the advanced design allows you to do the job with very few moving parts on the spreader. Gravity settles the slurry into the fan. The fan blows the slurry over the top of the spreader in a 6" pipe and out the back. So simple you know the unit will be easy to maintain.

So, let this well-built manure tanker spreader an excellent pattern on your fields today. Write for special prices now in effect and model information to US Farm Systems of Pennsylvania, 4020 Blue Ball Road, Nottingham, PA 19362, or phone 301-398-2948.

USDA proposes changes in P&S rules

WASHINGTON, DC — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is proposing to consolidate some and remove other of the rules dealing with livestock dealers, market agencies and meat packers under the Packers and Stockyards Act.

"We are proposing to remove some outdated rules and consolidate others," said B.H. Jones, head of USDA's Packers and Stockyards Administration. "This will result in clearer understanding of the rules and lessen some restrictions on business activities without decreasing the protection provided under the Packers and Stockyards Act for producers and consumers."

USDA is proposing to:

—Revise and consolidate eight trade practice rules into one. The rules deal with market agencies selling consigned livestock and purchasing out of consignments;

—Remove rules on employment restrictions, soliciting consignments and giving or accepting gratuities;

—Retain in present form a rule dealing with price guarantees and a policy statement dealing with payment of buyers' expenses;

—Remove three recordkeeping and accounting regulations and retain two others concerning the responsibilities of agents in accounting to their principals;

—Revise and consolidate four rules dealing with accounting procedures into two; and —Consolidate two rules and one policy statement authorizing disposal of records into a single rule.

The proposals were published in the Sept. 24 Federal Register.

Comments will be accepted until Nov. 23. Written comments, which will be available for public inspection, should be sent to the Packers and Stockyards Administration, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250; phone 202-447-7051.

Four ways to better hay

Gehl haying machines are the next best thing to sunshine. They help you make better hay even when the weather is going against you.

No-plug mowing. Our new disc mowers and disc mower conditioner tackle heavy standing grass or wet, down and tangled material without plugging. Heavy duty discs rotate at 3000 rpm to cut through just about any crop.

Leaf-saver mower conditioners feature all gear main drive and gentle-action conditioning rolls. Even when conditions are marginal you'll get fast-drying windrows that retain important nutrients.

Gentle raking. Our new full line of fingerwheel rakes gently gathers swaths up to 22-feet wide. They give you light and airy windrows while saving leaves and nutrition.

Exclusive Total Density Control (TDC). Only Gehl's new round balers with the unique "air-draulic" system give you Total Density Control. Lets you adjust bale density to suit the crop, moisture and field conditions. You get bales that stay round and resist weather. Choose from two models, the 1850 for over 2000 lb. bales or the 1450 for over 1000 lb. bales.

And you can easily move these big bales with Gehl bale handlers.

Beat the weather and make better hay. See your Gehl dealer.

E-town couple commits farm to ag preservation

ELIZABETHTOWN — "Whereas, Lancaster County has declared that preservation of prime agricultural land is vital to the public interest and advances the pubic health, safety, morals and general welfare of the county..."

So proclaimed the words of the second deed in the Red Rose County which permanently restricts the use of an E-Town farm soley to agriculture purposes.

For farm owners George and Patricia Baum, Monday's deed-signing culminated many years of discussion.

"We had talked about this for quite awhile," said Patricia. "We felt strongly that we should do it because it must be done."

The Baums, who purchased the land in 1964 maintain a 35-head milking herd. They inked their commitment, Monday, in front of several county commissioners and County Agriculture Preserve Board members.

"You're setting a fine example for others," offered Commissioner Jim Huber.

"We certainly appreciate the steps you have taken," added Commissioner Jean Mowery.

According to Preserve Board member Amos Funk, the Baum's decision already has added to the "snowball" which began when Ephrata landowners Ivan and Fannie Martin signed the county's first deed restriction, last month. Since then, Funk has been busy explaining the opportunity to interested groups and individuals.

Because of their commitment, the Baums are eligible for a tax break but waived the opportunity.

"We didn't know about a tax advantage until a couple weeks ago," said Patricia. "But that had nothing to do with our decision."

Ag Preserve Board solicitor Jim Thomas, right, reviews the county's second deed restriction with Elizabethtown couple George and Patricia Baum.

According to a recent report from the county Planning Commission, four additional townships' requests for agricultural preservation planning grants have been approved by the Commission.

The grants are being provided from a total of $50,000 in community Development Program funds made available for townships to undertake any kind of agricultural preservation planning.

To date, $48,000 has been awarded, all of it for use in establishing or stregthening agricultural zoning districts. Four townships which recently received approval of grant requests are: East Hempfield, $6,000; Little Britain, $3,200; Providence, $1,550; and Rapho, $3,500.

Before the contingent of well-wishers left the Baum household, Patricia glanced over at a photo of her two-month-old grandson and smiled.

"The farm will be here waiting, if he wants it," she said. —DT

Block announces '83 feed grain program

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has announced a 10 percent acreage reduction and a 10 percent paid land diversion for the 1983 feed grain program. Block also announced an additional $60 million allocated to the fiscal 1983 farm storage facility loan program beyond the $40 million originally allocated.

Block said current law requires for him to announce only a 10 percent acreage reduction and 5 percent paid land diversion program for feed grains. But, with such large supplies, he said an additional 5 percent paid diversion would help bring supply more in balance with demand. "We must do everything possible to reduce carryover supplies and increase commodity prices," Block said.

Block said the per bushel target prices for 1983-crop feed grains will be: corn, $2.86; sorghum, $2.72; barley, $2.60; and oats, $1.60. Regular Commodity Credit Corporation price support loan rates, per bushel, will be: corn, $2.65; sorghum, $2.52; barley, $2.16; oats, $1.36; and rye, $2.25.

The signup for the 1983 feed grain program will be Oct. 1 through March 31. Producers may request 50 percent of their projected 1983 deficiency payments and 50 percent of their 1983 diversion payments when they sign up.

USDA estimates per-bushel deficiency payment rates will be: corn, 21 cents; sorghum, 20 cents; and barley, 15 cents. Advance deficiency payments to eligible farmers will be half these rates. Advance deficiency payments are not authorized for oats.

Land diversion payments have been established at $1.50 per bushel for corn and sorghum, $1 for barley and 75 cents for oats. The land diversion payment is based on the per bushel payment rate times the farm yield times the acres diverted.

Farmers who request advance diversion payments at the time they sign up for the 1983 program will receive a payment equal to half the established payment rates.

A producer who accepts an advance payment, but who later does not comply with program provisions, must refund the amount of the advance payment with interest. Interest charged will be the rate in effect for commodity loans on the date of the advance payment, plus 5 percentage points.

To be eligible for these benefits as well as for price support loans, a producer must agree to limit corn, sorghum, oats and barley acreage planted for harvest to not more than 80 percent of the farm's feed grain base.

As under the 1982 program, two bases will be established: one for corn and sorghum, the other for barley and oats.

Producers also must devote to conservation uses an acreage equal to both the acreage reduction and land diversion requirements.

Land designated for conservation use must have been devoted to row crops or small grains in two of the last three years except for a summer fallow farm, for which the cropping requirement is for only one of the previous two years. Mechanical harvesting is not authorized and grazing will not be permitted during the six principal growing months on the acreage taken from production, Block said.

The 1983 feed grain bases will remain the same as the 1982 feed grain bases with adjustment for crop rotation. Neither cross compliance nor offsetting compliance will apply to the 1983 feed grain program.

Block said USDA is delaying decisions on the 1983 feed grain reserve program until the domestic and world supply and demand situation is studied.

He said the additional $60 million for the farm storage facility loan program is necessary because record corn, wheat and soybean crops have created widespread tightness in storage availability.

Md. State Grange set for annual session Oct. 14-16

SABILLASVILLE, MD — Maryland State Grange's 108th annual session will be held Thursday, Oct. 14 through Saturday, Oct. 16.

Delegates from twenty-five subordinates and seven counties — Carroll, Cecil, Frederick, Harford, Howard, Prince Georges and Washington—will meet at Sheraton Inn, Frederick, to debate resolutions concerning Grange policy. The delegates will be discussing resolutions concerning agriculture and conservation, health and education, roads and transportation, safety and farm taxes.

Women in the Grange will play a vital role in this year's session. Since its inception, the Grange Patrons of Husbandry have realized the importance of input from women in the work of our fraternal organization. The Grange has sometimes been called the liberator of the farmer's wife, as it was the first organization to give the same rights and privileges enjoyed by men.

The Women's Activities Luncheon will be held Thursday. Cookie contest winner will be announced by Louisa Hott, Maryland Women's Activities Director. Mrs. Mary Buffington, National Women's Activities Director will be guest speaker. Mary Rose Isennock, chairperson of the Maryland Deaf Scholarship Committee, will present the scholarship recipients. Four scholarships were awarded this year—two for the undergraduate and two at the graduate level. Public is invited to attend the luncheon.

Frederick County Pomona officers will confer fifth degree Thursday evening, beginning at 7:30 p.m. and sixth degree by the state officers will follow.

State Junior Grange Director, Ethel Brauer, will present awards to Juniors at the Junior Grange luncheon, Friday, 12:30 p.m.

An Agriculture Forum will be held Friday, 1:30 p.m. Ken Wisner, Frederick County Extension Agent, will serve as moderator. Four Maryland farmers knowledgable in their field of agriculture will compose the forum—James Moser, Thurmont dairyman; David Burrier, Union Bridge grain farmer; Dan Poole, Jefferson hog producer and Ken Mullinix, Howard County, beef producer. The public is encouraged to attend this hour-long Agriculture Forum to hear our Maryland farmers "speak up" for agriculture.

The annual Agriculture Banquet will be held 7 p.m., Friday. Mary Buffington will speak. Service to Maryland Agriculture awards, Granger of the Year award, Community Service awards will be presented. State Grange Talent contest winners will provide entertainment.

Call John Swadley, 301/733-2232; Maurice Wiles 301/898-7724; Lester Stem, 301/876-2408 or Harold Wolfe, 301/769-2820 to reserve your ticket for the banquet.

Speakers for the Youth Breakfast on Saturday are Jim and Sarah Grafton, Runner-Up 1982 National Grange Young Couple. State Princess Pam Martin, Thurmont and Prince David Harmon, Sabillasville, will be Maryland's official youth representative at National Session in Rhode Island. The 1982-83 Grange royalty will be presented Saturday morning. Maryland's Youth Director, Janet Wiles, Walkersville, will report for the youth.

Medfly is eradicated from Ca.

LOS GATOS, Calif. — The Mediterranean fruit fly has been eradicated from California, U.S. Department of Agriculture and California Department of Food and Agriculture officials at Medfly project headquarters announced last week.

"This has been more than a government effort," said USDA Assistant Secretary of Agriculture C.W. McMillian. "Without the support of the agricultural industry and the citizentry — cooperating with those of us in government — we could not have eradicated the Medfly."

According to California Department of Food and Agriculture Director Richard Rominger: "The fight against the Medfly has required the efforts of thousands of people and cost close to $100 million, but it's a small price to pay to protect California and the nation's agriculture.

California crops that could be attacked by the Medfly have an annual value of $5.4 billion. Additionally, the annual pest control and fruit fumigation cost to farmers — and indirectly to consumers — could be $250 - $500 million annually if the Medfly were established throughout the state.

"As staggering as these figures are, they pale in the face of estimated costs if the Medfly were allowed to spread and become established nationwide," said McMillan. "For instance, potential damage to U.S. citrus alone is set at $524 million annually."

During 1980 and the first half of 1981, after cancelling a planned aerial spraying program due to local opposition, program officials tried destroying host fruit, releasing sterile insects and other methods to get rid of the pest. The infestation, however, persisted and in July 1981, aerial spraying with malathion began.

Post aerial treatment studies have shown that fears expressed by some residents regarding possible health and environmental impacts were unfounded, McMillan said.

The last treatment took place in San Joaquin County Aug. 12, and at the end of the project only 92 square miles were under regulations restricting fruit movement, McMillian said. At the height of the infestation in 1981, about 1,400 square miles in 7 California counties were being sprayed weekly and nearly 4,000 square miles were under quarantine regulation.

"It's up to us to make sure people don't forget how the Medfly may have entered — perhaps in a single piece of fruit carried by an international traveler or in the mails," McMillan said.

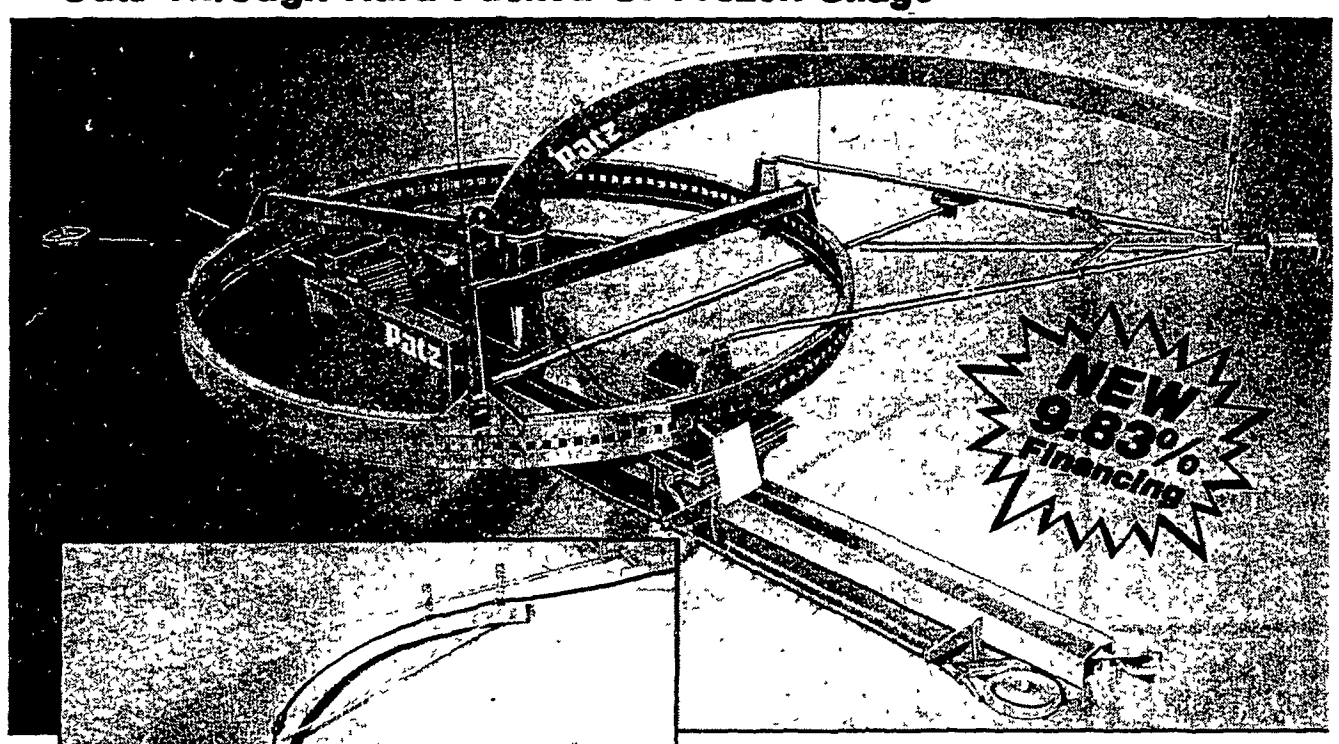
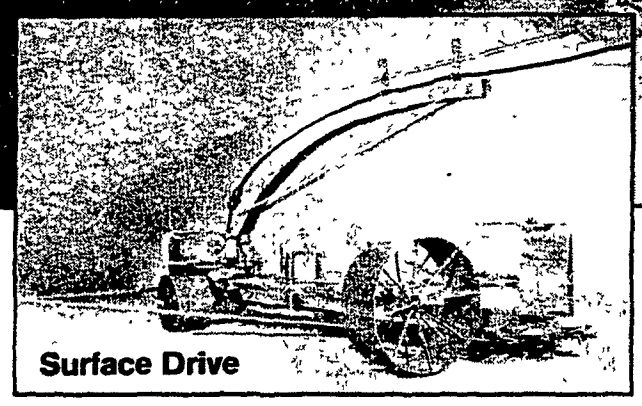
Patz Gathering Chain

Cuts Through Hard-Packed Or Frozen Silage





Patz double-hook gathering chain features knife-sharp cutters and claws for full-flow feeding.

Patz offers both ring-drive and surface-drive silo unloaders. The preset depth-of-cut control feature on the Patz 98B Surface-Drive Silo Unloader gives you truly automatic feeding. It eliminates monitoring of a winch and frees you to do other work while feeding. The Patz RD-820 Ring-Drive Silo Unloader offers the time-saving convenience of feeding immediately after repeated silo refills.

Handle varied feeds. Patz unloaders feature a gathering chain that cuts silage loose with a chain-saw action. The Patz gathering chain handles feed ranging from high-moisture corn to tough, hard-packed or frozen silage.

Silo walls stay clean. Spring tension keeps the self-sharpening Patz power cutter knives tight to the silo wall. With no silage buildup, the unloader stays level.

Adjustable impeller blades on all Patz unloaders allow close tolerance for maximum blower efficiency and longer life. Patz gathering chain delivers loosened silage to the high-capacity blower.

Uniform silage flow provided by the aggressive Patz gathering chain works well for measured feeding programs.

Utilize more silo capacity. Both Patz models can be fit into the silo dome to allow greater filling capacity. And both models are quick and easy to change over from filling to feeding.

If you aren't benefiting from all of these features with your present silo unloader, then choose from the latest Patz models. Patz unloaders fit most existing suspension systems for easy updating.

Buy or lease, whichever is most profitable for you.

Holtzinger's hog brings record price at York FFA show

Brothers Greg Bankert, right, and Brian Bankert, shared 4-H showman honors. Eleven-year-old Greg topped his older brother's reserve place. In the type competition, Brian's Duroc gilt took the championship in both 4-H and open showing.

Melissa Trostle took home two big awards from the York Fair 4-H swine competition. Her Spotted entry was chosen the 4-H champion barrow over all, while Melissa earned honors as the 4-H's best fitter of the show.

YORK — Beth Holtzinger's purebred Duroc barrow topped the York Fair's FFA swine show, and set a new Fair sale record when it crossed the auction block.

Ezra Good, bidding for Hatfield Packing Company, paid the young hog producer $2.65 for her champion.

It was a banner year for the Red Lion vo-ag graduate, who also wrapped up both the fitting and showmanship competitions. Beth operates a 400-head swine fattening operation in partnership with her dad, while also working part-time retailing fruits and vegetables.

Reserve honors again went to the Red Lion FFA, with Melissa Peters, R2 Stewartstown, taking the second high spot on the hog contest. Hatfield also bought that entry, paying $1.55 per pound for the purebred Duroc.

Judge for the vo-ag swine classes was former FFA member Clayton Winebark, who runs a 200-head breeding swine farm at R1 Rochester Mills.

Other Class winners in the FFA market hog show were Lori

Dauphin County observes "Conservation District Week"

HARRISBURG — At their Thursday weekly meeting the Dauphin County Commissioners proclaimed Oct. 3-9, as "Conservation District Week" in recognition of the service provided by the Dauphin County Conservation District since its organization on April 2, 1952," reports John E. Minnich, chairman of the Board of County Commissioners.

The Dauphin Conservation District will observe "Conservation District Week" by hosting the 35th Joint Annual Conference of the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation District Directors, Inc. and the State Conservation Commission. Over 300 conservationists are expected to attend the conference at the Americana's Host Inn, Harrisburg on Oct. 4, 5 and 6.

The theme for this year's conference is "Conservation Challenge." Despite federal and state budget cuts Pennsylvania's conservation districts are still providing sound management of the Commonwealth's natural resources.

Throughout the conference directors and staff from Pennsylvania's sixty-six conservation districts will exchange ideas and discover new methods to promote and practice conservation.

Directors serving the Dauphin Conservation District are: Aaron Hoffer, chairman, Lower Swatara Township; James Landis, South Hanover Township; George Moore, Millersburg; John Witmer, Upper Paxton Township; Russel Cassel, South Hanover Township; Mervin Adams, Upper Paxton Township; and Norman P. Hetrick, County Commissioner.

Staff of the Dauphin Conservation District include: David Ball, District manager; Duayne Forsberg, resource specialist; Gay Chubb, program assistant; Robert Shannon, county conservationist and Diane Dorer, program assistant.

Many die in tractor accidents

LANCASTER — Many farmers die each year in tractor accidents. But not all of these accidents occur on the farm. Twenty-five percent happen on the highway. Tractors travel at about 15 miles per hour. A motorists traveling at 55 miles per hour has only a few seconds to recognize the slow moving tractor and take steps to avoid an accident. Farmers prevent accidents by using flashing lights and displaying the slow moving vehicle emblem. Motorists can prevent accidents by being aware that not all of the vehicles on the highway are going 55.

W. Hempfield farmer fights Lanc. Sewer Authority plans

BY SHEILA MILLER

CENTERVILLE — B. C. Brubaker owns a farm in West Hempfield Township, Lancaster County. He's been the proprieter of that 90-acre farm since 1960. Now, Brubaker, like many other farmers before him, has come face to face with a "higher power" and stands to lose 1.6 acres of land to a public utility through condemnation. That "higher power" is the Lancaster Area Sewer Authority.

Brubaker, who has been fighting LASA over the proposed sewer line during the past several months, said he learned of LASA's plans to cross his farm with a 1,300 foot forced main sewer line only eight months ago. After numerous telephone calls and a personal appearance at last week's monthly meeting of the LASA Board, Brubaker says he has decided to retain an attorney to represent his case.

What is the case? According to West Hempfield Township zoning officer Don Kauffman, the Lancaster Area Sewer Authority is buying right-of-ways in the township in order to install a main trunk line to carry sewage from an undersized pumping station to a new sewage treatment plant. He says the new forced main is necessary since the old, undersized pumping station's inadequacy allowed raw sewage to sometimes flow into nearby Stricker's Run.

The location of the proposed main is within roughly a 40-foot area along an active Conrail railroad track which dissects Brubaker's farm. Although the LASA acquisition would vary in width, it basically snugs up against the railroad right-of-way and involves a portion of Brubaker's field that is brushy and overgrown — where old, unused equipment serve as trellises for weeds and vines. Bordering this idle strip, Brubaker's cultivated fields butt up against a field access road which separates brush from crops.

Brubaker contends that the $2,011 he will receive from LASA is not a "fair price" for the condemned 1.6 acres, pointing out a neighbor received $3,000 an acre for "killdeer land" — land where nothing will grow, he explains — when the real estate was privately sold. Brubaker claims LASA will save considerable sums by coming through his property rather than following the road.

A LASA spokesman counters, saying the engineers "selected the most practical route with the least amount of inconvenience.

The Brubaker farm is used for cultivating corn and tobacco, with only 5 acres untillable. About one-third of the farm is prime agricultural land, and part of the property falls within the county comprehensive plan for an agricultural preserve area.

The farm is leased out to a neighboring farmer.

But Brubaker is not so much concerned about the loss of prime farmland as the loss of revenue from the sale of his land to LASA. During his hearing before the LASA Board, Brubaker emphasized the utility was "taking property rights away" and that the sewer line installation would hamper future housing development.

Being zoned rural agriculture, Brubaker would be limited to only one lot for every 25 acres unless he requested a zoning change. "I can't do with the land what I want to, but the sewer authority sure can," Brubaker admonishes. He says the farm was his "retirement" — "selling building lots."

Although Brubaker concedes he will be able to farm the land taken by LASA at no charge, and with no interference to field operations since there are no manholes located on his property and the pipe will be buried underground, he states his reason for fighting the sewer authority is because he "objects with the price and tactics offered by LASA."

He points out that he has to pay yearly fees to people on whose property he erects billboards to advertise his campsite (located across the tracks from the crop fields), referencing the "once and done" payment he'd receive from LASA.

"A billboard can be taken down," he says. "You can't do away with a sewer."

Dutch dairymen visit York Fair

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Among the several hundred thousand visitors to the recent York fair were three top dairymen from Friesland, northern Holland.

Taking part in a sire-study visit were Klaas Van Der Ploeg, Joe Van Der Pol, and Boyen De Boer, who began their U.S. tour looking at daughters of several sires owned by Atlantic Breeders Cooperative in Lancaster.

The co-op's Willis Ritchey hosted the trio on their several stops in southeastern Pennsylvania to study offspring of Atlantic's Very, Charisma, Marvex and Stormy, sires currently popular in the "Wisconsin part of Holland."

Van Der Ploeg's 160 head registered Holstein-Friesian herd leads the nation's production list, with an average of 17,698 pounds milk, 785 fat, on a 4.37 percent fat test. His third-generation operation, which hosts frequent U.S. visitors, is one of the North Sea country's larger dairy herds. Average cow numbers in the approximately 60,000 Holland milking herds is 77 head, equalling out to about one cow per person over the nation's population.

Far greater in numbers are hogs, with an estimated 20 million head boosting Dutch farm exports. According to Van Der Ploeg, some 80 percent of Holland's pork production goes out of the country to customers around the world.

Since the political upheaval in Iran that replaced the reign of the Shah, exports to that middle East country, which purchases large quantities of Holland cheese, have increased. Another large volume buyer of Dutch cheeses is Venezuela.

Following their two-day visit to Pennsylvania herds, the Dutch dairymen planned stops in Rochester, New York, the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin, and Worldwide Sires in California.

Among the special visitors to the York Fair were three top dairymen from Holland who stopped by to see show daughters of Atlantic sires. From left are Willis Ritchey, their host from the breeding cooperative, Kathy King of Kingway Holsteins, Klaas Van Der Ploeg, Joe Van Der Pol, Bayen De Boer, and Paul King, Kingway and director of Atlantic.

USDA plans 50¢/cwt. dairy collection

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block recently announced the support price for manufacturing grade milk will be $13.10 per hundredweight for the new marketing year beginning Oct. 1.

This price is for milk with a national average milkfat content of 3.67 percent — which is equivalent to $12.80 per hundredweight for milk of 3.5 percent milkfat.

The support level, unchanged from that in effect for the last two marketing years, is the minimum allowed under the recently enacted Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982.

USDA also announced proposed regulations for implementing the collection of 50 cents per hundredweight on the sale of all milk marketed by dairy farmers. The dairy price support deduction is authorized under the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1982 and collections will begin Dec. 1.

The act requires the deducted funds be sent to the CCC to help offset a portion of the cost of the dairy price support program. All dairy farmers, including those who sell milk directly to consumers, are liable for the deduction.

The collection of the dairy price support deduction will be by USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service as its dairy division is already involved in the marketing process for 68 percent of the nation's milk through the 49 federal milk marketing orders it administers.

Basic provisions of the proposed regulations provide that:

- The responsibility to make and submit the deductions to the CCC will be on the person who actually makes payment to individual dairy farmers for their milk.
- Those responsible for making the deductions will be required to file a brief report on the milk volumes subject to the deductions.
- Payments to the CCC are to be made at the time final payments are made each month to producers.

Authority for this phase of the amended dairy price support program runs from Oct. 1, 1982, until Sept. 30, 1985. Such deductions must be terminated any time USDA estimates purchases of dairy products under the program will fall below 5 billion pounds milk equivalent during a marketing year.

Comments on the proposed regulations should be sent to: Director, Dairy Division, AMS, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250, where they will be available to the public. The public comment period will be 45 days. Further information on the proposed regulations is available from Maurice Martin of the AMS Dairy Division of Washington.

Inspectors expand antibiotic tests at slaughter house

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Beginning Oct. 20, U.S. Department of Agriculture meat and poultry inspectors will be able to use a rapid analytical test to detect antibiotic residues in all species of animals.

"Expanding the use of the swab test will speed the inspection process and enhance USDA's ability to assure the wholesomeness of meat and poultry," said Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. "We are also cooperating with producer organizations in educational programs that will reduce the possibility of harmful residues, which provides further consumer protection.

"USDA has used the rapid test — called STOP for 'swab test on premises' — since 1979 on dairy cow carcasses. It will now be available for use on all meat and poultry carcasses under federal inspection," said Houston.

"The swab test reveals within 18 hours whether there are antibiotic residues in carcasses," Houston said. "By comparison, it presently takes one to two weeks to complete laboratory analyses."

Carcasses showing no antibiotics can move into commerce without delay, Houston said, while those in which antibiotics are detected are retained by USDA for further testing. When violative levels are found, the carcasses cannot be used as food.

"Since USDA began using the rapid test on dairy cows, antibiotic residue violations have declined dramatically, due largely to the cooperative efforts of USDA and dairy producer organizations," Houston said. "By practicing good management procedures, including using medications according to label instructions during the period before animals were marketed, producers were able to reduce costly violations and delays.

"Antibiotic violations for cows dropped from 3.7 percent in 1978 to 0.6 percent — about half of one percent — in 1981. For most other meat and poultry, violations range from 0.2 to 2.7 percent," Houston said.

To perform the test, inspectors insert sterile swabs into liver or kidney tissue and place them on a microbiological plate coated with harmless organisms. The plate is incubated overnight.

When antibiotics are present, bacterial growth is stopped around the swab tips, indicating the need for further analysis before the carcass can leave the plant.

In contrast, when the carcass is free of antibiotics, bacteria grow uniformly right up to the swab tips, and the inspector can approve the carcass.

The final rule expanding use of the slaughterhouse testing program was published in the Sept. 20 Federal Register. After proposing this rule March 12, USDA received 10 comments, with six favoring the proposal.

"The issues most often raised concerned test accuracy and processing delays," Houston said. "The swab test program for cows has shown the in-plant procedure actually speeds inspection. And the accuracy of the swab test has been confirmed in USDA field service laboratories, where it has been used as a screening test for the past five to six years."

Farming's Futures

By David K. Sauder
Commodity Broker
Trade Tech, Lancaster

Some farmers, rather than build storage and hold their crops until later in the season when the basis has narrowed, sell their crops at harvest. Then they buy futures contracts equivalent to their production, and hold the "paper" bushels instead of the real ones.

Those who use this futures technique claim that their savings on storage and financing make it an attractive way to speculate on the basis. However, it also exposes them to more price risk than if they held their crop.

Sometimes, futures also are used to cut losses. Stockmen, in particular, have used their technique when they find themselves locked into a downward cycle. Hedging in a loss can be an effective way to prevent even larger losses that might put them out of business.

Although cash market contracts may offer similar opportunities to price your output in advance, extend your selling period, and cut losses, futures hedging can claim at least one potential advantage — greater flexibility.

If you contract to deliver grain to the local elevator at a fixed price, the elevator then resells it, at a merchandising markup, to someone else who wants delivery.

The elevator cannot let you out of the contract without paying a penalty to the buyer down the line. A futures transaction causes no such repercussions — and that's why it can be entered into or offset with one phone call.

Fixed price, short crop

Here's a slightly different situation: Suppose you signed a fixed-price contract with a processor but run into production problems. Worse, it is beginning to look like a short crop year across the country. Rising prices may mean a heavy loss if you have to buy substitute bushels at harvest to meet your contract obligations.

Are you stuck? Not necessarily. You can buy enough futures to offset your anticipated production shortfall.

If you act promptly, any losses suffered by later replacing the shortfall might be largely offset by gains on the futures. The futures thus protect essentially the same margin projected from the cash contract.

All of these obviously simplified examples show how hedging can be useful to particular farmers in particular cases. But no evidence indicates that a farmer can consistently benefit from hedging without careful study of the markets and the situation at any given time.

If you hedge, you have to invest the time necessary to become familiar with futures, how they work, and how they might be useful to you.

Purchase corn on equivalent dry matter basis

UNIVERSITY PARK — With the increasing use of storing high-moisture corn grain in silos for feeding livestock, more and more corn is being purchased at harvest time at moisture contents above the standard (56 pound per bushel at 15 1/2 percent moisture) used in the grain trade.

Much of this corn is purchased at moisture levels above 25 percent, says Sam Dum, Extension farm management specialist, Penn State.

"Farmers should recognize the weight required to equal the dry matter in the standard bushel of shelled corn at these higher moisture levels," notes Dum.

Usually high-moisture corn is sold by the ton. To determine its ton value based on the price of the standard bushel, first divide 2,000 by the indicated weight for the given moisture content. This indicates the equivalent number of standard bushels in a ton.

Multiply this figure by the quoted price for a bushel of shelled corn. For example, if shelled corn (15 1/2 percent moisture) was $2.50 per bushel or $89.25 a ton, 28 percent corn would have an equivalent value of $76 per ton.

It requires the following weights at the indicated moisture levels.

contracts of this type would have a limitation of six years, but that there is a continuation clause that NFO may utilize.

The second recourse may be to turn to the Doctrine of Waiver, which states that courts can bar an action if one party has delayed in bringing certain action against the other. Glantz says, "NFO sat on their rights and let these people assume that dues were not owed."

The third step would be a failure consideration in which both parties are obligated to do something when there's an agreement. Glantz says that the agreement has not been fully carried out on NFO's side.

But Marvin Beshore, attorney with Beshore and Bickley law firm representing NFO, disagrees. He says, "In my opinion, the failure consideration is deficient because NFO hasn't fallen short of their agreement at all. When someone becomes a member, what a person gets is the right to be a member, to get their publications, to have NFO behind them and such. The agreement does not say that any percentage or amount (of services or produce) will be sold at any time by them."

Beshore elaborates on the farmers' situation by pointing out that they failed to do what is stated in the agreement, "and that is to write a simple letter to NFO within a certain time limit informing them of their desire to withdraw from the organization."

According to Beshore, a '20-day-more, 10-day-less' clause is not uncommon for farm organization contracts and that every member has to sign the contract before becoming a member, therefore having ample opportunity to read the clause.

"I'd like to add," says Beshore, "that NFO is an organization of farmers and they (the Board of Directors) have authorized the attempts to collect these dues."

Beshore confirmed that suits have been started which claim dues within the Statute of Limitations time, bringing the totals anywhere from $450 to $600.

Echoing Beshore's statement, attorney Richard Green, general council for NFO, says, "People tend to forget that the people who authorize the suits are farmers themselves — farmers who have already paid their dues and want these members to pay their's also.

"A lot of what a person gets from an organization is what he puts into it," he states. These members all had opportunity to keep the organization active in their area. They might not have received benefits from the local level, but they still were being represented in legislation in Washington. They tend to forget that."

Franklin District meets

CHAMBERSBURG — About 75 persons recently attended the Franklin County Conservation District's Annual Picnic Meeting held at Meyers Woods near St. Thomas. The group included district directors, FmHA directors, ASCS Community Committeemen, office staff, and their families.

A brief business meeting was held following the catered meal.

This year's Annual Conference of the State Association of Conservation District Directors, Inc., will be held at the Host Inn, Harrisburg, on October 4-6. Dauphin County Conservation District will be the host district.

Three county landowners were approved for conservation planning assistance. They are Wayne Kuhns and Chester Nicarry, Hamilton Township; and Leroy Whipple, Lurgan Township.

Directors present were Glenn Dice, Galen May, Ronald Allison, and Robert Woods.

Japanese demand puts buckwheat in "bullish market

HARRISBURG — A killing frost that occurred on Aug. 26 in Canada wiped out 50 percent of the country's buckwheat crop, reported George Blankley, president of the Buckwheat Institute of America.

Speaking at the organization's annual meeting held here recently, Blankley predicted a bullish market for U.S. buckwheat growers as a result of the Canadian loss. He noted the demand by foreign buyers, especially the Japanese, has already caused prices here in the U.S. to jump $5 a hundredweight.

Although Blankley stated the Canadian buckwheat farmers will salvage what's left of their 110,000-acre crop (even if it's only five bushels per acre), he noted their diminished crop will fall far short of the Japanese order they expected to fill after December. Instead of the 15,000 metric tons needed, Canadian farmers will only be able to deliver about 6,000 metric tons.

The shortage created by the Canadian freeze, Blankley said, "will put a demand on the rest of the world to meet the deficiency." He pointed out Japan requires 90,000 metric tons of buckwheat each year to make a delicacy noodle used during religious holidays.

Of that 90,000 tons, the island country raises 20,000 tons of buckwheat each year and imports the remainder from Canada, China (16,800 tons), Brazil (14,000 tons), the United States (12,000 tons), Africa and other countries (2,000 tons).

Assessing the situation, Blankley stated, "I don't know how they're going to get the rest of the buckwheat" since it's too late for farmers to plant more to make up the loss.

With demand outstripping supply, Blankley projected the future Minneapolis market price for buckwheat could jump from the $350 per metric ton level to $500 "until this is all over." Already, he said, the price of buckwheat rose from $9 a hundredweight to $14.50 a hundred at Minneapolis (where most of the Japanese buckwheat is sold). This price increase occurred after news of the Canadian frost hit the trading floor.

Here in the U.S. some of the buckwheat fields in Minnesota and Missouri were damaged by the same weather pattern that devastated the Canadian buckwheat. Even some counties in Pennsylvania (Erie, Somerset, Crawford) experienced a killing frost in August. But, for the most part, said Blankley, the U.S. crop is "looking very good" as the harvest began last week.

Blankley reported one Penn-

Ben E. Zechman, left, owner of Zechman's Flour Mills, Inc. of Pottsgrove inspects some of this year's Pa. buckwheat harvest which promises to produce triple the tonnage over last year's crop. He tells George Blankley of Narbeth, right, president of the Buckwheat Institute of America, this particular buckwheat tested 51 pounds per bushel, while the average for the grain is 46 pounds per bushel.

What to consider when planting buckwheat

NARBERTH — George Blankley, president of the Buckwheat Institute of America and owner of S.F. Scattergood & Co., Montgomery County, gives some advice to farmers who are interested in raising buckwheat:

"Since buckwheat is not a true cereal, it is adapted to situations that often are unfavorable for other grain crops. It requires approximately ten weeks to mature and so can be grown at high altitudes and in areas with short growing seasons.

"Buckwheat grows best in a cool, moist climate such as is in the Northeast.

"Although buckwheat can grow under a fairly wide range of conditions, it is quite sensitive to climatic extremes. It is easily killed by freezing temperatures and does not do particularly well with high temperatures and dry weather.

"Hot, dry weather is especially detrimental when the crop is in bloom, for it often results in flower blasting. This prevents seed formation and can greatly reduce yields.

"To minimize these problems of frost and flower blasting, it is suggested that planting be timed so that the plants develop during the warmer part of the summer (mid-July to August for most of the Northeast) The plants should flower and set seed during the latter part of the summer when temperatures are cooler

Soil requirements

"Buckwheat is not as particular in its soil requirements and will produce a better crop on poor soils than any other grain. Moreover, it will produce satisfactorily on newly cleared land, drained marshland, or on other marginal land.

"It does not do particularly well on heavy soils or on those with a high level of limestone. Because of crusting, clay soils may cause problems with seed emergence.

"Buckwheat is best suited to light, well-drained soils, such as sandy and silt loams. It has a higher tolerence to soil acidity than any other grain crop.

Seedbed preparation

"Although fair buckwheat yields are possible when the crop is planted on rough, poorly prepared land, best production requires a carefully prepared seedbed. Since the buckwheat plant has a rather small and shallow root system, the seedbed should be firm to help the young plants obtain essential nutrients, reduce drought injury and lessen lodging. For loose soil, cultipack or roll before and after drilling.

"If the field was in small grain or a cultivated crop (such as potatoes) the previous year, or when the soil has already been prepared for another crop, disking, harrowing with a spring tooth field cultivator or vibrashank could replace the plowing operation. Plowing is usually necessary in all other situations.

"When buckwheat is planted in abandoned fields, old pastures or land not cultivated for several years, it is best to plow deeply several weeks before planting (fall or spring). The soil should then be thoroughly tilled periodically with a harrow to improve its physical condition, retain moisture, and destroy weeds.

"For land that is not so rough, plowing and harrowing can be delayed until shortly before seeding. In any event, after sowing, the field should be rolled or cultipacked to produce a firm seedbed. This is especially important on sand or silt loam soils

Varieties

"In the past, varieties of buckwheat most commonly grown in the United States were: Japanese, Silverhull, and Common Gray. Through the years these have intermixed until at the present time they make up what is termed Common buckwheat. This is the type presently grown in most of the Northeast. Many other varieties exist, such as Tempest, Mancan, Manor and Pennquad.

"To date research has shown little or no difference in yields. But Common has been found over all to be the most reliable, best yielding, and least expensive seed. Buckwheat seed is usually available from local seed dealers.

Planting

"To avoid frost damage in spring and fall, regulate the time of seeding so that the crop will have approximately ten weeks of frost-free growing weather. Experimentation in the Northeast indicates that mid-June through mid-July is the best time to plant: Maine, June 15-25; New York, June 20-July 5; Pennsylvania, June 30-July 15.

"Buckwheat seed will germinate at any temperature between 45 F to 105 F. Seedlings emerge after only three to five days. Buckwheat blooms four to six weeks after planting and is mature in about ten weeks.

"Buckwheat should be sown with a grain drill at a planting depth of ½ to 1 inch. Seeding deeper than 1½ inches will lead to a poor stand. Drilling the seed will produce a more even stand, but if a drill is not available, a satisfactory crop can be obtained by broadcasting the seed followed by cultipacking or rolling. Do not plant in wet, muddy soil.

"The seed should be sown at a 40 to 75 pound rate per acre based on 90 percent germination or better. The lower rates result in stout plants that branch profusely and resist lodging. Stands that are too thick produce spindly plants with few branches, poor seed production, and susceptibility to lodging. Fifty pounds per acre seems to be the most common quantity planted.

Fertilization and lime

"From a yield standpoint, buckwheat does not respond to high applications of fertilizer. A buckwheat crop that yields 30 bushels per acre will remove (on actual basis) approximately 42 pounds of N, 20 pounds of phosphorus, and 35 pounds of potash from the soil.

"Too much nitrogen encourages excessive vegetative growth, causes lodging and decreases grain yield. On the other hand, buckwheat responds favorably to applications of phosphorus (from 60-100 pounds per acre) depending on the soil fertility and soil pH. As with any crop, plant food should be applied according to soil test.

"Phosphorus makes several significant contributions to the successful production of buckwheat. It enhances early emergence, stiffens stalks helping to reduce lodging, contributes to early plant maturity, enhances quality of grain, and increases grain yields.

"Research over a period of years has indicated more than 40 pounds per acre of actual nitrogen and potash and 100 pounds per acre actual phosphate are uneconomical.

Weed, disease, insect control

"No serious diseases affect buckwheat, although leaf spots and root rot sometimes occur. Wireworms and aphids may attack buckwheat but usually do little damage. Japanese beetles can be quite harmful since they feed heavily on the flowers

"Deer, as well as other birds and rodents, are fond of buckwheat and can create problems Deer can be quite damaging when they feed in fields of ripened grain. Some of these problems can be avoided by not planting near woodland.

Harvesting

"Over the years, harvesting buckwheat has presented growers with problems, such as lodging and grain shattering. This has been especially true with growers who depend on the first killing frost to determine the date of harvest.

"There are two methods of harvesting buckwheat:

"Direct cut with combine - After buckwheat has been killed by frost, it should be harvested as soon as possible (7-10 days). Although this action may create a few problems with straw wrapping around and clogging the combine, it will minimize shattering losses.

"Windrowing or swathing - Because of the way buckwheat ripens, immature seeds will always occur on the plant at harvest. Therefore, harvesting shoud be done when the maximum number of seeds are ripe (50-60 pecent). At this time the crop should be cut and windrowed prior to combining. This procedure removes most of the risk of shattering which often results when using the direct combining method.

"Windrowing buckwheat has been extensively tested in western Canada, and since 1975 at the University of Maine. This procedure has proven so successful in both increased yield and less risk harvesting due to windy, rainy wheather, it is now the recommended harvesting procedure.

"After swathing or windrowing, allow buckwheat to cure a few days in the windrow. Because buckwheat is a fruit, nearly mature seeds will actually ripen in the windrow. It should then be combined by using a pick-up attachment as soon as weather permits. this method helps reduce shattering because weather is not dictating harvest time.

Machine settings

"When windrowing, cut the grain as high as possible to keep the windrow up off the ground to minimize the amount of stones and dirt picked up. To avoid excess grain shattering during the combining operation, adjust the reel speed to correspond to the forward speed of the combine or windrower, and reduce the pickup speed to minimum.

"Regardless of whether the windrower or direct cut method is used, when combining buckwheat reduce the cylinder speed to about one-third of that used for wheat or oats. Proper adjustments of the concave openings, both front and rear are important.

"Research indicates in most cases the concaves should be opened as high as possible to remove the maximum amount of grain without excessively breaking the straw. This is approximately 3/8-inch in the front and ¾-inch in the rear.

"Before doing much harvesting, one trip should be made around the field and the grain checked to see if adjustments are correct. If the seed is shattered and broken, the cylinder speed should be reduced further until the damage no longer occurs.

"Some other suggestions in direct combining are to cut the crops as high as possible and to keep the ground speed down so that the machine is not overloaded. As much air as possible should be used without blowing out clean grain

"Chaffer openings shoud be regulated so that the grain is dropped to the lower sieve before it has passed over ⅔ the length of the chaffer. Too much coarse material should not be admitted. The lower adjustment sieve should be closed as far as possible without carrying clean grain into the return elevator.

Yields

"With favorable conditions, yields of 20 to 40 bushels of buckwheat per acre can be achieved under the direct cut method of harvesting, 30 to 50 bushels under the windrow method."

Bradford Forest Landowners celebrates first annual meeting

BY JANE BRESSEE
Staff Correspondent

TOWANDA — One of the few organizations of private woodland owners in the nation recently celebrated its first annual meeting with dinner at the Wysox Presbyterian Church.

Having officially begun in March 23, 1981, with the aim to develop a unified voice for woodland preservation and management, the Bradford County Forest Landowners Association has steadily grown until the present membership is 53 family members owning approximately 100,000 acres.

James VanNoy of Canton, the first president, acting as master of ceremonies, gave credit to James Lacek, local forester from the Department of Forestry, and James Finley, former Penn State Extension Forester in the northeast region, (now an assistant professor at Penn State) for the original idea to start the group to assist private forest landowners in knowing how to properly manage their valuable natural resource. With the help of Al Homan, Bradford County Extension Agent, membership has doubled over the past year.

John George, district conservationist of the Soil Conservation Service in Wyoming County, was introduced as the featured speaker with the topic "Wise Use of the Natural Resource, Woodland."

Beginning with the early settlers who found Pennsylvania with 29 million acres of virgin timber, George briefly gave a history of timber development in the state. As early as 1681, he said, the first timber conservation law was made that for every 5 acres cleared, one acre of timber should be left.

But, he said; it was never enforced.

By 1881, 75 percent of the virgin timber still remained. But then the Industrial Revolution began which basically exploited all natural resources. Timber was cut to tan leather, make charcoal, buildings, fences, etc. So much lumbering was done between 1850 until 1870 that the center of logging in the nation switched from Maine to Pennsylvania. By 1920 the virgin forest had disappeared leaving brambles and scrub oaks, George said.

In 1898 the state bought its first land and in 1920 the federal government bought a half million acres, the Allegheny National Forest, he noted.

Seventy-five percent of the woodland in the nation is privately owned, George said, and in Pennsylvania, out of the 382,000 acres of woodland, 334,000 acres are in private hands. The demand will be on the individual owner, he emphasized, to make the decisions about what to do with this land. There will be a call for saw logs, pulp wood, fuel wood, and other products. Oil and gas exploration, mining, and recreation also threaten the preservation of woodland.

George congratulated the group for beginning an organization to help manage their woodland for economic reasons, to maintain it for public pleasure, and to preserve it for future generations.

Officers elected for the coming year to be installed in January were: Jeff Block, president; James VanNoy, vice president; Susan Block, secretary; and Dan Puterbaugh, treasurer.

A spokesperson for the committee working on Clean and Green Use Values had reached their conclusions after months of study and were ready to report their findings to the Bradford County commissioners in the near future. Use value of forestland has been under scrutiny since early in 1982 when it became known that the commissioners had raised the use value from $40 an acre to $73 per acre. At the appeal of the Forest Landowners group, the Grange, and the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association, the commissioners had reversed their decision until a study could be made.

The next meeting of the Bradford County Forest Landowners will be in November.

Attending the trip were Anna Uhlman, Downingtown; Betsy Wollaston and Beth Jenkins, Toughkenamon; Walter Moore, Chatham; Nancy Yarnall, Oxford; Cissy Trotman, Landenburg; Howard and Lois Mark, West Grove; and Josh Weinstock, Phoenixville. Chaperones were Donna Connell, 4-H Extension agent; and Jean Yarnall, Oxford.

WE'RE GROWING BETTER

Bullish buckwheat

sylvania farmer who had a yield of 51 pounds per bushel from his buckwheat stand. "That's almost unheard of," he exclaimed. "Most times we're lucky to get 46 pounds." He added the average yield per acre is 27 bushels.

The only factor limiting this year's Pennsylvania buckwheat crop, said Blankley, was the lack of seed. He chastised dealers for not providing enough seed to meet growers' demands. He reported that every bit of buckwheat seed in Pennsylvania was sold this summer, and additional orders were met through Canadian imports.

Since buckwheat is planted between July 1 and July 15 in Pennsylvania, much of what leads farmers to decide to plant the grain is weather — rain limiting corn planting. This, said Berks County miller Morris Brown, is what leads to seed shortages.

"Farmers should plan ahead," recommended Brown. Otherwise, he noted, the millers bear the risk of stocking buckwheat seed for sales that may never materialize.

Although most Pennsylvania farmers are still growing the "common" variety of buckwheat, competition for a slice of the Japanese export market may soon require them to switch varieties. The Japanese prefer Mancan buckwheat and pay a $2-4 premium for this variety grown predominantly in the Manitoba, Canada area.

Blankley cautioned dealers to supply the right seeds to their buckwheat growers next year so they can cash in on a projected $6.50 a bushel price. The Japanese millers prefer Mancan because of its uniform seed size which makes keeping broken hulls out of the flour an easier screening task.

If Pennsylvania farmers join others throughout the U.S. in meeting the growing demand for buckwheat by foreign buyers, they could possibly cash in on a $15 million export commodity, concluded Blankley.

Features solar digester to produce methane

Genesis — new 800-sow operation dawns

And it was so

"And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind. And it was so. – Genesis 1:24.

"And to every beast of the earth and to every fowl of the air, and to everything that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life, I have given green herb for meat: and it was so." – Genesis 1:30.

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

CARLISLE — A new farrow-to-finish swine operation – with the name of Genesis – which has a total capacity of 800 sows, is gearing up operations near Carlisle, Cumberland County.

Under construction for more than two years, the three-building complex will become one of the largest breeding and market hog operations in the state.

In addition, it will be among the most modern, featuring such innovations as a solar digester to handle the manure and convert it to methane gas for generating electricity for the operation.

Principals in the operation include:

–L. B. Phillips, large land holder and real estate developer in the rolling rural area about 10 miles southwest of Carlisle Boro.

–Dale Loy, graduate of Penn State and former manager of the University of Pennsylvania's PPAB 480-sow unit at the New Bolton Center.

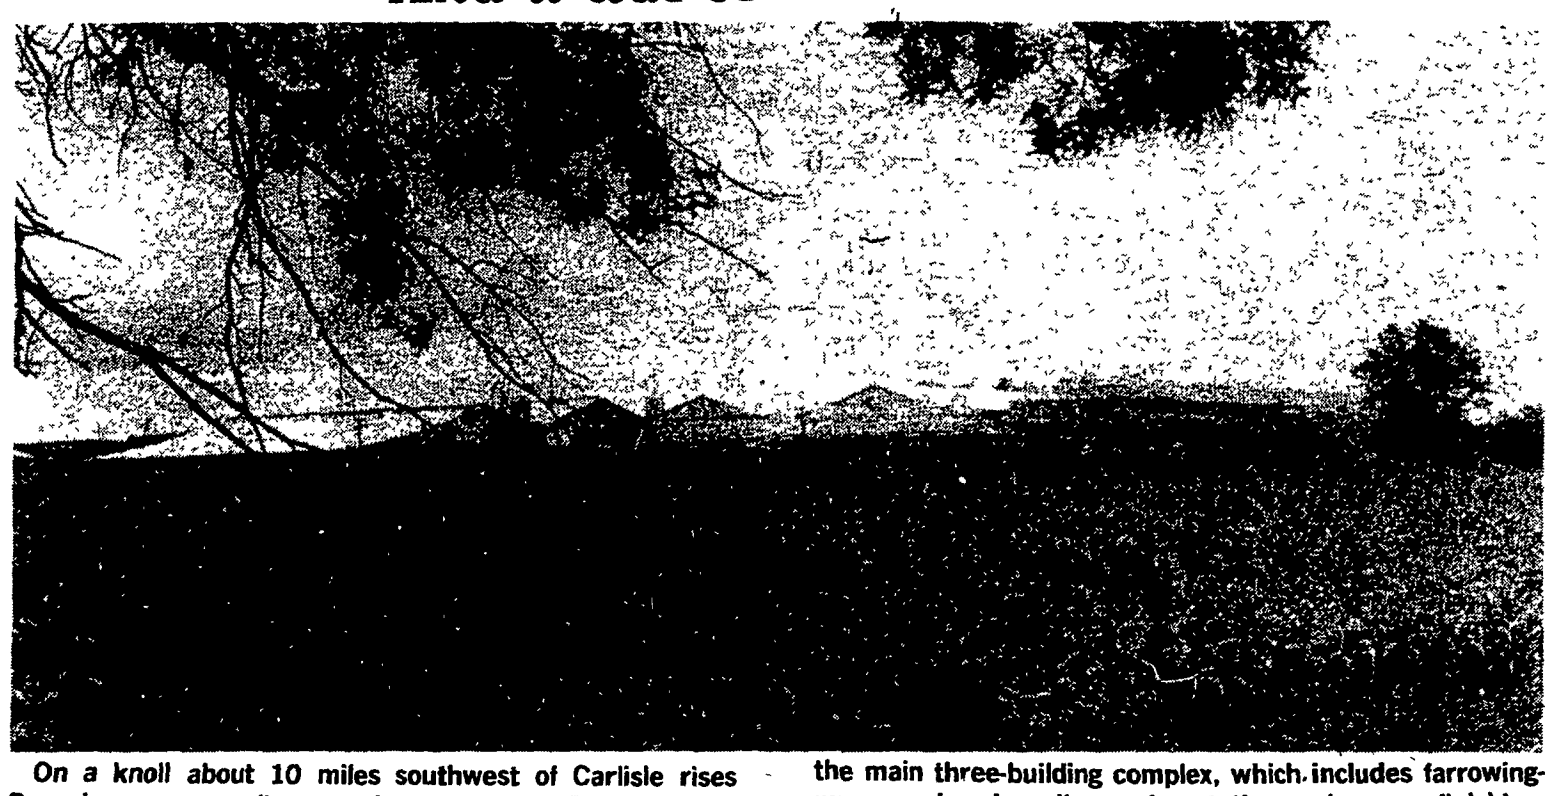
–White Oak Mill, R5 Manheim, which also will be supplying feed.

Presently, a total of 346 gilts and 29 boars are located at Genesis.

In three weeks, population will be up to 550 gilts and 32 boars.

By the end of December, initial population will be completed with 760 to 800 gilts and 36 boars.

With population naturally starting in the breeding and gestation wing of the complex, construction is virtually completed in the farrowing and nursery wing and is being accelerated on the grower-finishing wing and the solar digester building.



On a knoll about 10 miles southwest of Carlisle rises Genesis — new confinement hog operation. Framework of new building in center is location of solar digester to convert manure into methane for energy. Construction continues on the main three-building complex, which includes farrowing-nursery wing, breeding and gestation and grower-finishing. Other buildings will be converted to boar multiplier unit.

Here are some capacities and features of the various sections:

–Six farrowing rooms with 20 crates each for a 120-sow capacity to accomplish 30 farrowings a week on a three-week weaning schedule. With a total wire system, features include crate ends with sloping "splash boards" to facilitate manure handling and an eight-inch clearance between the wire and the concrete below to aid in the high-pressure cleanup.

–Five nursery rooms with a capacity of 400 each for a total of 2,000.

–A breeding section with space for 180 sows and 36 boar pens. The sows are held in the section throughout their 21-day heat period.

–A 480-sow gestation section with individual automatic Cable-Vey feeding system, which is also featured in the breeding section.

–A four-room grower-finishing wing with a total capacity of 3,000. A floor feeding system will be conducted in this area in which the hogs are fed smaller rations on a more frequent schedule to increase the feed conversion efficiency rate.

–Two post-nursery rooms, designed to get the young hogs accustomed to concrete after just coming off the wire, have a total capacity of another 1,000.

Thus, together with some outside holding pens and older facilities which will be converted to a boar multiplier unit, total animal population throughout the facilities could eventually reach 10,000 at any one time.

With a facility of such size and complexity, energy efficiency is obviously of major concern.

The solar digester, believed to be the first of its type in the state, will receive the manure from the higher-elevated complex through a system of underground piping and distribution chambers.

The digester is located between the complex and a lower lagoon. The manure will first flow into the enclosed, plastic-domed digester unit, which also will include a boiler and generator.

"We hope to use the sun to produce methane gas during the summer and then supplement with the boiler," Phillips explained.

"The unit should not only facilitate an odorless handling of the manure, but hopefully provide half of the energy needs for the operation."

After being "digested," the manure residue will flow into the lagoon with approximately a year of storage. It will then be pump irrigated onto the surrounding corn ground.

Construction of the complex features double-wall concrete block with insulation. The ceilings have an R30 rating.

Acme ventilation with cool cells will be utilized during warmer weather.

Now into the fourth week of breeding, three different lines are being started as the operation gets going from scratch.

–Initial concentration is cen-

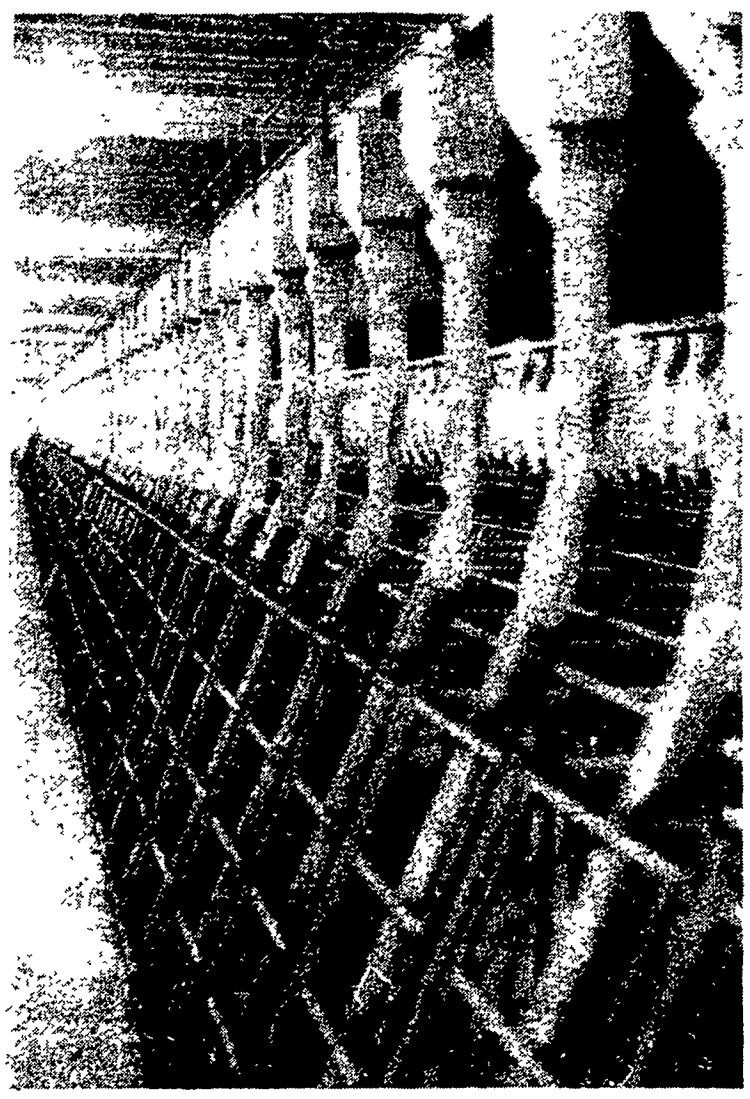
This is one of six farrowing rooms with 20 wire-system crates each. Ventilation tube is at upper right. They will go into use in January.



Disappearing off into the background is the individual Cable-Vey feeder system found in the 480-sow gestation section.

Two of the principals in Genesis are L. B. Phillips, at tractor wheel, and Dale Loy, just behind him. In background, work continues on building to contain solar digester.

IMPCO's Honan travels the "good-bye" circuit

BLUE BALL — More than 300 people piled into the Blue Ball firehall, Tuesday evening, for their annual District 6 dinner meeting of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative.

They came for dinner, for fellowship and for an up-date on their co-op. But perhaps more importantly, they came to bid farewell to their general manager James Honan, who is retiring after this year.

"It sure has been fun," Honan said in his farewell remarks.

Honan, an Indiana native joined the dairy co-op in 1947. The IMPCO veteran of 35 years will be replaced by Paul Hand, currently the co-op's assistant secretary.

A graduate of DePaul and Purdue Universities, Honan entered the IMPCO ranks at a time when the average shipper produced less than 300 pounds of milk per day. Today, the figure has spiraled to approximately 2,000 pounds daily.

But Honan has witnessed the spiraling costs of production, decreasing milk consumption and crippling surplus, as well, in his three decades of service. Tuesday evening, he commented on the current 50-cent per hundredweight assessment levied on all milk produced beginning December 1, 1982.

"We'll probably have to live with his one until stronger legislation is passed," Honan said. He added that individuals or groups have 45 days to comment on the Administration's price support policy before the assessment begins.

"The intent of the program is not to stop people from entering the dairy industry. The actual purpose is to reduce milk production," he noted. However, the general manager questioned the program's effectiveness.

"Some farmers may find that adding two cows will make up what the fifty cents takes off. I'm not suggesting you do that, but it's a matter that has to be worked out. We'll have to wait a few months to get answers," Honan said.

Citing the defeated state milk referendum, Honan stressed the need for increased promotion and encouraged producers in Orders 4 and 2 to continue to support their advertising funds.

Following his comments, Honan received a king-size handmade quilt from District 6 members.

A Kinzers family also was honored, Tuesday, for their 25-year membership with Inter-State.

Melvin Hershey and sons, Jay and Glen accepted a plaque commemorating their long-time membership. The Hersheys milk between 56 and 60 Holsteins on their 100-acre Spruce-Knoll Farm.

District 6 business activities included the election of officers and delegates. The following people were chosen for offices in the Gap, New Holland-Leola and Paradise locals:

Gap Local — Jay Hershey, president; Gordon Hoover, vice president; Donald Miller, Herb Benner, Glenn Hershey, J. Kenneth Hershey, Norman Hershey, Melvin Martin, Samuel Martin, Jr., Elam Riehl, Nathan Stoltzfus, C. Ivan Stoltzfus;

New Holland-Leola Local — Jere Skiles, president; Thomas Denlinger, vice president; John Groff, Clarence Hoover, Walter Martin, Naaman Stoltzfus, Jacob Dienner, A. Ronald Martin, D. Lamar Weaver;

Paradise Local — J. Richard Herr, president; Allen B. Mellinger and John A. Harsh. —DT

'Easy' handling of big bales costly to farmers

COLUMBIA, Mo. — The big bale boom swept the countryside because farmers saw it as an easy way to handle hay. But now it looks as though those who take it too easy are losing money.

"Our research definitely shows that it pays for farmers to spend time and money to store or stack and cover big bales," said Ron Belyea, University of Missouri-Columbia dairy scientist.

Belyea and Stan Bell, research specialist at the UMC's Southwest Center near Mt. Vernon, Mo., showed outside uncovered bales had 31 percent greater nutritive losses than barn-stored bales or those stacked and covered outside.

Furthermore, cattle fed the outside, uncovered bales were consuming about 3.5 pounds less dry matter a day and were gaining 0.2 pounds less than animals fed stored or covered bales.

Of the outside storage methods, the most effective involved stacking the large bales in a pyramid, on top of bales set on end, and then covering them with a tarp.

"Stacking bales in a pyramid three high would be easier and safer than placing a two-high pyramid on top of bales set on end," Bell said. "It's important to leave the ends of the stacks open, especially if the hay is completely cured to prevent the top bales from molding."

Bell and Belyea figured any money spend by farmers to cover these big bales would be a good investment.

figuring alfalfa is worth $80 a ton, they figured savings of lost hay would pay for a 20-cent-per square foot tarp for a three-high pyramid in one year and for all methods of storage if the tarp can be used a second year.

"The hidden loss in animal performance makes any method of covering the bales cost-effective," Belyea said.

"In fact, if a farmer has about 300 of those 800-pound bales, he could easily save several hundred dollars a year by properly storing or covering them. That means he could probably afford to build a pole shed with a firm floor and open to the south and pay for it in a few years."

"In the long run, a permanent storage facility might be the easiest way to handle big bales, but each farmer must analyze his own situation and decide if this is worthwhile."

tered on the use of female-line white boars of Yorkshire and Landrace lineage with an elite group of females to produce the operation's own breeding females.

–Then, a white line boar crossed with about 25 percent colored stock will be used to add more muscling to produce the commercial gilts.

–Finally, boar-line boars with Hamp and Duroc ancestry will be utilized with the commercial females to produce the market animals.

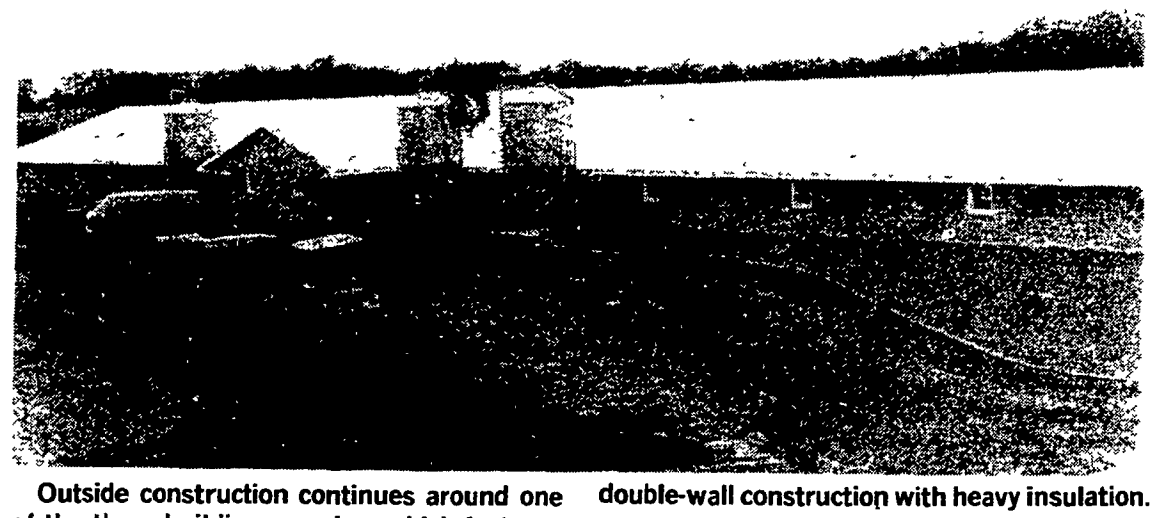
"My goal is a happy medium between the needs of the packer and what is needed for breeding," explained Dale Loy.

"We will work with the packers to provide what they want and still maintain the prolificy and milkability necessary in the female lines.."

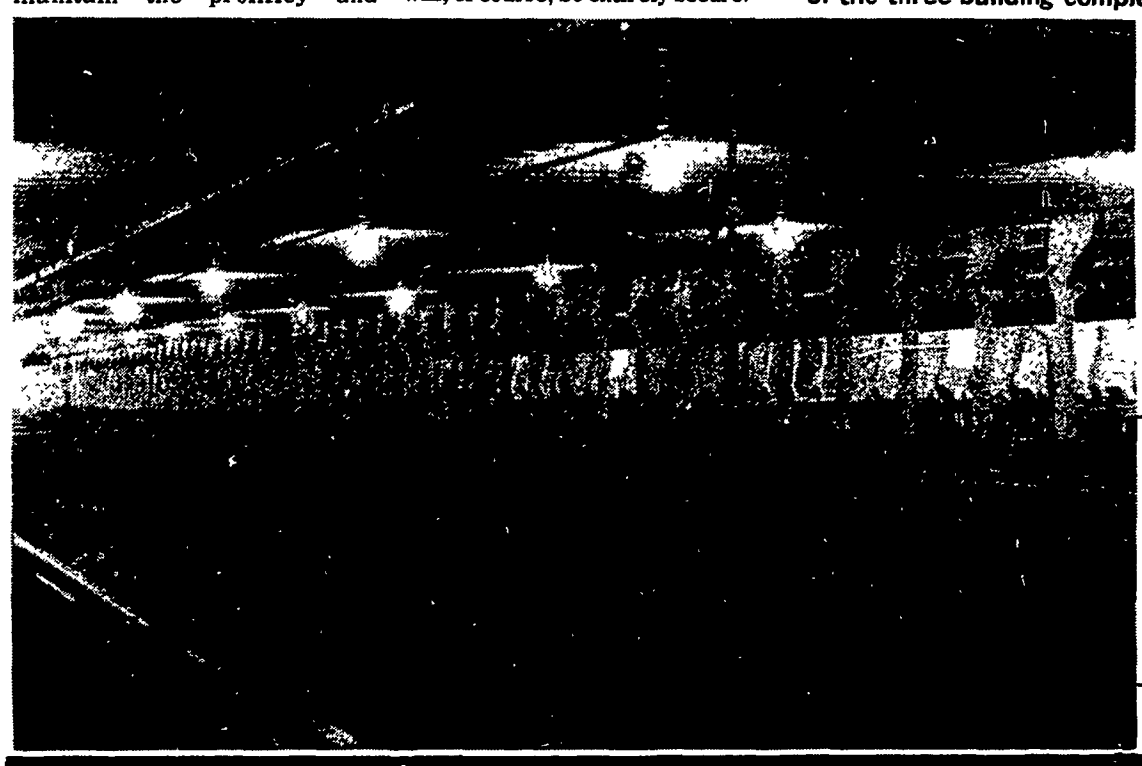
Artificial insemination will also be utilized, particularly on the elite group of females, where some sacrifice in litter size is not crucial.

"We have barns and facilities on other farms so that champion boars from the Midwest can be brought in and kept in total isolation and only the semen brought to the complex."

Phillips' land holdings comprise some 2,000 acres and there appears to be no problems with maintaining needed isolation for a confinement operation of that size. Facilities include male and female shower in-out facilities to guard against disease introduction. The operation once fully underway will, of course, be entirely secure.



Outside construction continues around one of the three-building complex, which features double-wall construction with heavy insulation.



A staff of about three will be utilized, including possible internship opportunities for an ag student from Penn State or other college.

Loy's duties at New Bolton Center included instruction of the vet students in swine management. Previously, he also worked on swine operations in the Pine Grove area, had his own 60-sow unit and worked a short stint with DeKalb Swine Breeders in Kansas. He had been at New Bolton for the past two and one-half years.

With an operation of that size, feeding efficiency is also stressed.

"With the individual feeders, I should be able to handle the 480-sow gestation unit in about five minutes," Loy said.

"Then I can spend more time with the sows, checking heat and working with them more individually.

"Among the eight groups of hogs in the grower-finishing rooms, feed will be dropped in from four to eight times a day.

"This system is being used in Europe and the more frequent feeding of smaller amounts should increase feed conversion from three to five-tenths."

The first pigs are scheduled to be born in January. Finishing will begin in March and the first market hogs sold off about June. When fully operational, 15,000 or more hogs will be marketed to packers annually.

The size of the operation and its supporting facilities will provide a diversity of merchandising possibilities, in addition to the market hogs. Ventilation is designed for 20 percent over capacity, along with wells and other facilities.

Eventually, breeding stock, bred gilts, and excess feeders will be sold off. Also, there could be a contract setup to help young operators with facilities get started.

"I consider this a unique opportunity that has been given me," Loy said.

"If I can help someone else get started, it would be a way of repaying."

And Phillips adds his sentiments.

"It has been a long time in construction and coming," he said.

"But it should be worthwhile when we start marketing pigs worldwide."

September report confirms record corn crop

UNIVERSITY PARK — The first estimate of the 1982 corn crop, released in August, projected a record crop of 8.32 billion bushels. H. Louis Moore, Penn State Extension agricultural economist said that many analysts were surprised that the figure was projected that high.

The second estimate released on Sept. 10 left the estimate unchanged at 8.32 billion bushels. There was surprise that the estimate wasn't higher since growing conditions seemed to improve during August through most of the corn producing states.

Subsequent reports before completion of harvest may push the estimate higher. Moore said that in seven of the last ten years the final harvest exceeded the crop estimate made in August.

Corn supplies will be even more burdensome than earlier expected with another large crop. The pressures of finding storage and markets at harvest will make this an unpleaant harvest season for most corn growers. Prices have been down and are likely to continue at depressed levels through the harvest season.

The price pressures of a bumper harvest have been even more severe considering the sharp increase in carryover supplies and the drop in exports. Exports in the marketing year ending Sept. 30 will probably not exceed 2 billion bushels, down nearly 15 percent from last year. The carryover of corn when the marketing year begins on October 1 will be about 2 billion bushels.

Unless domestic use and exports increase substantially in the months ahead, the carryover of corn could be a record 2.8 billion bushels on Sept. 30, 1983 — the equivalent of the total crop produced in 1955.

Corn production has grown rapidly in the last two decades. The increased production has not come from bringing substantially more acres under cultivation but from sharp increases in yield per acre. The yield per acre in 1982 may exceed 114 bushels compared to less than 60 bushels per acre on the national average in the early 1960's.

Though some price recovery may occur after harvest, the burdensome carryover of corn may keep downward pressure on price at least until planting time next year, Moore reports.

Results of egg referendum likely Oct. 15

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The last day to vote in the American Egg Board referendum was Monday, and now comes the task of tallying the votes.

Conner Kennett, director of USDA's poultry division, projects the final results of the behind-closed-doors count will be made public sometime around Oct. 15. "The fellows are locked in next door counting and verifying the ballots now," he reports, from his Washington D.C. office.

The reason for the lengthy wait between the final vote and the outcome announcement is due to the need to verify each ballot with each eligible farm, he explains. These results are then printed out by computer, listing each state's vote.

Archery deer season opens today

HARRISBURG — The first of Pennsylvania's 1982-83 big game hunting seasons gets underway today as archers begin hunting whitetail deer.

Almost one fourth of the nation's archery hunters purchase licenses in Pennsylvania. Last year, a record 277,677 archery licenses were sold, an increase of about 10,000 over the preceding year.

During the 1981-82 seasons, archers reported harvesting a record 6,070 Pennsylvania deer, and the Keystone state again has a large herd of whitetails this year.

There will be 24 hunting days during the regular statewide archery deer season which closes Friday, Oct. 29. An extended four-day season will run from Dec. 15-18. Hunting hours are from one half hour before sunrise until sunet. Sunday hunting is prohibited.

Use of bow and arrow is also permitted during the regular antlered and antlerless seasons in November and December.

Archers may take one deer of either sex, regardless of size, during the October season. If a deer is tagged during the archery season, the hunter is not permitted to take another whitetail during the regular gunning season.

In addition to a regular resident or nonresident hunting license, an archery license is required to hunt deer with bow and arrow during the archery seasons. Archery licenses are available at $2.20 each from county treasurers, all issuing agents, or by mail from the Pennsylvania Game Commission, License Section, P.O. Box 1567, Harrisburg, PA 17105-1567.

Archers are reminded by the Game Commission that mechanical bow releases are now lawful to use, but arrows must be of cutting-edge broadhead design for big game and turkey. Deer must be tagged immediately, and the big game report card mailed to the Game Commission within five days after harvest.

Paraguayan IFYE compares farm life in the Americas

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

Every day is a new experience for Luis Ketterman. The twenty-year-old youth lives on a 500-acre farm in the South American country of Paraguay, and is spending five months in the United States learning about farming in this country as an exchangee in the International 4-H Youth Exchange program.

Luis is observing closely all that he sees because he wants to return to Paraguay and share some of this knowledge with farmers there.

He works for the Cooperative Colonias Unidas, the second largest cooperative in the country. It is a purchasing, marketing, and supply cooperative, and Luis works in the office with exports as one of his main responsibilities.

Major crops in Paraguay are wheat and soybeans. While most of the soybeans are exported, the wheat is used domestically. Another important crop for Paraguay is tung oil, which Luis' cooperative processes and exports. Tung oil is used for furniture finishing.

"A little corn is grown there, but we don't have too much," Luis states. "We also grow some tea and the cooperative processes that.". Another feature of the cooperative is a large supermarket, similar to markets in this country.

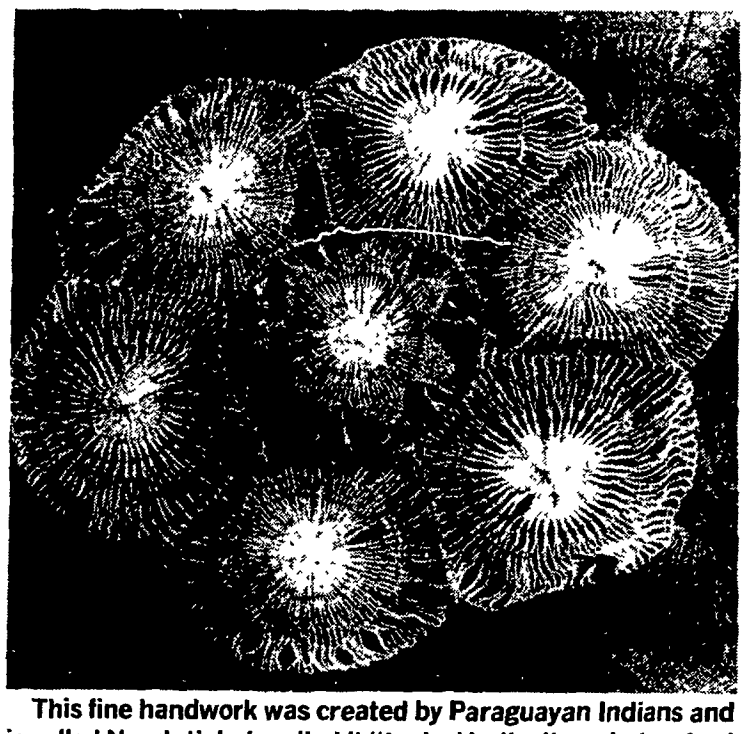
It was through the cooperative that he had the opportunity to travel as an IFYE exchangee. He explains it this way, "The 4-C clubs (similar to 4-H) are sponsored by the Ministry of Agriculture. The cooperative and the agriculture ministry work together. In the cooperative, we have a section which is called the farm education section. They sent me to one IFYE program to see if I was interested."

Obviously he was, and when he returns he will work with the farm education part of the cooperative, teaching farmers ideas which may make their agriculture better.

Luis keeps a daily journal of his activities here, and is taking many pictures, and he also wants to share what he has experienced with members of the 4-C clubs.

He finds agriculture in this country somewhat different, noting, "You have a lot more machinery and use more chemicals than we do. Where I live we have a lot of farmers. It is good fertile land, and we live about two miles from a river, near Argentina. We don't use much fertilizer but we do use insecticides."

Twenty-year old Luis Ketterman, an IFYE exchangee from Paraguay, points out his South American homeland on a globe. Ketterman is at home there on a 500-acre wheat and soybean farm.



This fine handwork was created by Paraguayan Indians and is called Nanduti. Luis called it "typical Indian" work, inspired by looking at spider webs.

Luis pointed out that most equipment must be imported which makes it very expensive. It comes from the United States, Europe or Brazil.

He said most farmers, including his family, use harvesting equipment rented from the cooperative but own their own tractors.

One of the things which made a big impression on Luis, was the care one host father in Kansas took of his equipment. "Before he started to work he put oil in and checked it over. When he was finished he cleaned it up. He took very good care of his machinery. I think this is something I can tell farmers in Paraguay." he said.

Luis is quite busy when he is home in Paraguay. He works full time at the cooperative and attends college in business in the evenings. On weekends, he works on his parents' farm, where he lives.

The Ketterman family farms soybeans and wheat, and Luis says their 500-acre farm is medium sized for the part of Paraguay.

The family also raises about 20 beef cows, 10 pigs and 60 chickens for their personal use. Most farmers, he says, also have large gardens to supply fresh vegetables for the family.

The climate in Paraguay is tropical, and Luis says it averages about 90 degrees in the summer, getting as low as 30 degrees in the winter. "It freezes a little in the morning in the winter." he states.

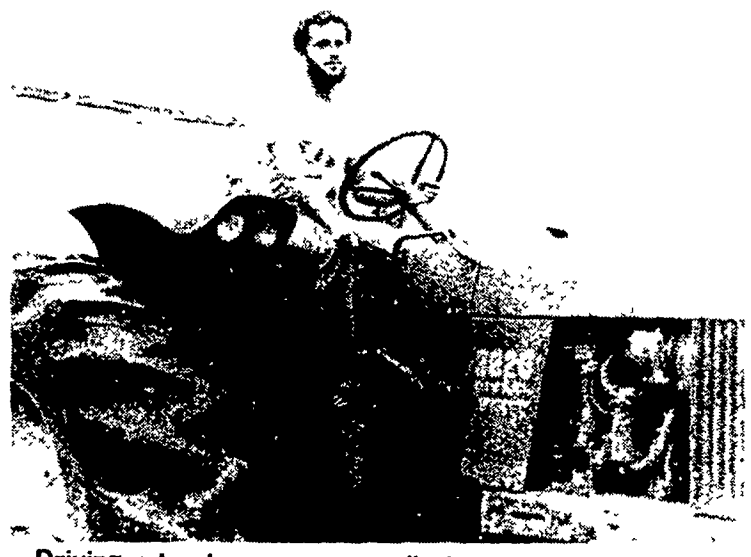
But he laments, "I have never seen snow." It is pointed out to him that since he is leaving in October, he probably will not have that wish granted while staying in Pennsylvania.

It is currently winter in Paraguay, and Luis notes, "I will have three summers this year. I had summer at home, now I have summer in the United States and I will have summer when I return."

Luis says his family has always been farmers. They are part of a large group of German people

(Turn to Page B4)

Cutting tobacco was a "totally new" experience for this international visitor. Here Luis Ketterman stands in a full tobacco barn, proud of the work he contributed to the harvest at the Elvin Brenneman family farm near Mount Joy.



Driving a tractor came naturally for Luis, since he is accustomed to helping with field work on his father's Paraguayan farm. This is one job he can assist with on the farms he is visiting as part of the International 4-H Youth Exchange program.

Paraguayan IFYE

living in Paraguay who emigrated there in the 1700's. Luis says, "My family speaks German mostly." Of course they also speak Paraguay's official language, Spanish, and he says he learned both as he grew up.

Luis also speaks Guarani, an Indian language, and can understand Portuguese. He said he studied English for three years in high school, but adds, "I could not speak it when I came. I learned it right now here." The lessons have given him a solid foundation because he now can speak and understand the language easily, and he admits that he can also think in English.

There are native Indians in the western and northern portions of Paraguay, and Luis brought some of their crafts with him.

Traveling first to Kansas, Luis visited with three farm families around that state, then came to Montgomery County in Pennsylvania. When he leaves Lancaster County he will travel to Perry county and from there he will have a short period of free time before traveling to Washington and returning to his native Paraguay.

A "totally new" experience for Luis was cutting tobacco on the Elvin and Marian Brenneman farm, Mount Joy, where he stayed while in Lancaster County. "I like doing it," he said, noting that cutting it is what he likes best.

He has also learned to milk cows in this country and helps with chores at the barn.

Luis had the interesting experience of traveling to Harrisburg to attend the Pennsylvania Dairy Princess pageant to watch his host sister LuAnn compete for the title. To his pleasure, she was named Miss Congeniality and second runner-up. Luis said there are also farm queens in Paraguay, but no dairy princess.

A member of Paraguay's 4-C clubs, Luis took pigs as his projects, but admitted that he never did well in showing them.

The food in the United States is "a little different, but not too much. I like all the food," Luis states. He laughed then and said his grandmother tells him how much she likes to cook for him because he likes everything she makes. He is definitely not hard to please, and is hard pressed to name a food that is his favorite here.

Luis says he has not been homesick at all. Another young person from Paraguay traveled to Kansas with him and is now in Illinois. Two girls from Kansas are currently in Paraguay, and one of them stayed with Luis' family.

Luis noted that every family in Paraguay has one car, but pointed out that gasoline is $4 a gallon so cars are small and people conserve. Cars are "mostly Japanese" with Volkswagons and there are not as many paved roads, according to Luis. Motorcycles are a popular method of transportation.

Asked about dating, Luis said that most young people marry between the ages of 20 and 25. Eighteen is the legal age for driving in Paraguay, but there is no age limit for drinking alcoholic beverages. Luis said that illegal drugs are not a problem with young people in his country because the government is "very strong in this."

The country of Paraguay is 157,000 square miles and has 4 million people. Luis said the government is the "same as here," with the president elected every five years. The current president has served for 28 years. Luis says, "He is a very good man."

Luis reflects on his experiences, "It's valuable because you have the chance to meet new people and live with new people. You see how they work and live and what they do every day. I have changed a lot within myself."

Special farmer's program to Yugoslavia planned

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Yugotours, Inc., in conjunction with JAT-Yugoslav Airlines, has introduced an agricultural study tour program in Yugoslavia for American farmers and interested visitors.

The study tour program comprises visits to private farms and to communal agricultural areas near Belgrade and Dubrovnik. The program is sponsored by "Agronomik," a PK Beograd Institute for Scientific Research, and by the Yugolsav National Tourist Office.

The all-inclusive 10-day package costs $995 (for departures from New York) or $1,095 (from Chicago) per person, and is available from November 1, 1982 through February 28, 1983.

Yugoslavia is a semi-developed industrial country with a developed agricultural base that delivers high yields of wheat, corn, sugar beet, and sunflower. Also prominent in production for exports are livestock and meat products, fresh fruit, tobacco and wines.

Approximately 30% of the population works on 1.5 million privately-owned farms and more than 2,000 large agricultural "combines." Cooperation and coproduction between the combines and the private farmers is based on common economic interests and equal partnership, and is becoming an increasingly viable factor in the advancement of farm production. Important changes in crop patterns and the large-scale introduction of modern farming methods and technology are fostered by numerous institutes for agricultural scientific research.

During the 4-day stay in Belgrade, the bustling capital city of Yugoslavia, program participants will tour farms in the city's vicinity, including the agricultural combine "Beograd," one of the largest in the world. One of the high-lights of that portion of the study tour will be an excursion to the village of Kovacica which has become internationally famous for its colony of farmer - Naive Art painters. Yugoslav farmer-artists will welcome American visitors in their homes. Another attraction is Skadarlija, the turn-of-the-century bohemian district of Belgrade, renowned for its cobblestone streets, gas lamps, and romatic, cozy restaurants that feature gypsy violins, singing and dancing, along with great food and wine.

Yugoslavia has been luring Western European tourists to spend their vacations there at a rate of over 6 million per year. There is a good reason for that: the country is endowed with stunning scenery and magnificent cultural riches. The main draw has always been the beautiful Dalmation coast, and the strongest magnet there is Dubrovnik, "The Pearl of the Adriatic Sea." Program participants will enjoy the opportunity of staying there and exploring it at leisure, for off-season is the best time to experience Dubrovnik at its best.

Apart from a comprehensive sightseeing tour of the major attractions in the centuries-old Dubrovnik, the participants will tour small, private farms in the nearby Konavle region, and farmers' wine cellars. The study program also includes a full-day excursion and visit to the "Hepok" agricultural combine near Mostar. During the 5-day stay in Dubrovnik one day has been set aside for an optional motorcoach tour of the Bay of Kotor fjord and the Montenegro coast.

This program has been designed in such a way it offers both an extraordinary professional and travel experience. The organizers and sponsors have made every effort that the program be in compliance with existing federal tax laws regarding application to participants' personal tax returns. Also, JAT-Yugoslav Airlines has been granted a special low fare for this program.

The $995 (or $1,095) agricultural study tour program in Yugoslavia includes round trip air transportation from New York or Chicago, accommodations at first class hotels (double occupancy), two meals daily, local sightseeing tours, visits to the agricultural combines, farms and Kovacica, all transfers and ground transportation, English-speaking escort, meeting and assistance at the airports, luggage handling, and all taxes and gratuities.

An extra-week's stay in Dubrovnik ($135 per person) is available to those who would like to prolong their visit to Yugoslavia. Also available are optional European 3-day "mini-vacations" by air to Istanbul ($250) and/or Athens ($240).

For program brochure and other information please contact the Yugoslav National Tourist Office, 630 Fifth Avenue, New York, NY 10111, tel. 212-757-2801.

Planting bulbs

Green leaves and colorful flowers poking through that last bit of snow means one thing — spring. Plant bulbs this fall and you'll be sure not to miss this early show!

Spring-flowering bulbs need a cold period to flower, and fall planting provides this. Also, planting in the fall enables bulbs to produce the roots they need (for the strength) to properly nourish the leaves and flowers.

Where can you plant bulbs? Anywhere the soils is well-drained. If the soil isn't well-drained, the bulbs can rot. If your soil is high in sand or clay, add some peat or other well rooted organic material and work it in to a depth of 12 to 18 inches. Add some bonemeal or a general-purpose fertilizer to the soil and work it in to give your bulbs a boost for future years.

When you are ready to plant, you can choose from two methods. One is to dig an area large enough to place a cluster of bulbs, the other is to dig individual holes for each bulb. Either way, large bulbs — tulips, hyacinths, and daffodils — are planted 6 to 8 inches deep.

The smaller bulbs — crocus, grape hyacinth, and Scilla — are planted 2 to 4 inches deep. Set the bulbs, pointed side up — the flat side is where the roots from — firmly in to the soil. Then cover with soil and water thoroughly. The watering helps the bulbs start forming roots right away. After this, normal rain and snow should provide adequate moisture. If dry periods do occur, though, you'll need to water.

Covering your planted areas with a mulch such as hay, bark, leaves, or evergreen boughs will help prevent the freezing and thawing which can heave the bulbs out of the ground. Remove the mulch in spring when the shoots are about 1 or 2 inches tall.

As you plan your bulb planting scheme, remember they look best when clumped together for waves of color. Plan to use the total variety of bulbs available so you'll have bulbs flowering from late February to May, and more flowering from September through late fall.

Some very early bulbs include Winter Aconite, Glory of the Snow, and grape hyacinth. Crocus, too, flower early, but somewhat later than these others. Later blooming spring bulbs include tulip, daffodil, and hyacinth.

Bulbs such as daffodils, crocus, and Scilla give an added benefit. Once planted, they will naturalize (meaning they multiply quite a bit) so that their flowering display will increase in years to come - with little effort on your part.

A visit to a garden center will acquaint you with these and other bulbs available. For the small amount of effort needed, nothing you plant will give you more pleasure than bulbs.

Casseroles reduce kitchen work

Having trouble thinking of something to serve for supper tonight?

Then prepare a casserole.

A main dish casserole reduces the job of cooking and menu planning to simplicity.

Casseroles combine plenty of protein and nutrition and lots of delicious foods such as hamburger, noodles, rice, vegetables, cheeses, etc.

And, seldom do you need side dishes, because the well-chosen casserole combines all the tastes into one.

Another bonus to the casserole is that they can be prepared ahead of time and simply popped into the oven or microwave minutes before supper.

NOODLE-EGGPLANT CASSEROLE

1 eggplant pared and cut into 1/4 inch thick slices
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1/2 c. fine dry bread crumbs vegetable cooking spray
8 oz. medium egg noodles
1 T. salt
3 qt. boiling water
16 oz. can tomatoes
1 can tomato sauce
1/8 t. pepper
1/2 t. oregano
1/3 c. grated Parmesan cheese
1 pkg. part skim mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced

Dip eggplant into beaten eggs, then into crumbs. Spray a large skillet with vegetable cooking spray. Place over low heat. Saute eggplant slices on each side until lightly browned.

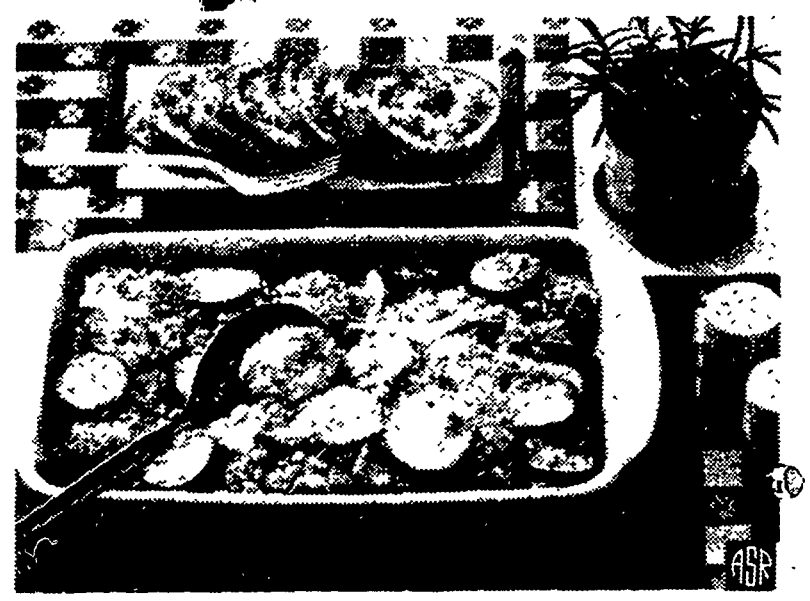
While eggplant is cooking, gradually add noodles and salt to rapidly boiling water so that water continues to boil. Cook uncovered, stirring occasionally, until tender. Drain in colander.

Spray 2-quart casserole with vegetable cooking spray. Combine tomatoes, tomato sauce, pepper and oregano. Place a layer of eggplant in casserole. Cover with some noodles, tomato mixture and cheese. Layer until all ingredients are used ending with mozzarella cheese. Cover. Bake in 375 degree oven about 30 minutes. Remove cover. Bake 15 minutes longer.

SALMON ZUCCHINI BAKE

1 can salmon
1 1/2 lb. zucchini
1 clove garlic, minced
2 T. butter
3/4 c. shredded sharp Cheddar cheese
1/4 c. grated Parmesan cheese
1 c. dairy sour cream
1/2 t. salt
1/8 t. pepper
1/4 t. mixed Italian herbs
1/2 c. buttered bread crumbs

Drain salmon and break into chunks with fork. Slice zucchini 1/4-inch thick. Saute zucchini and garlic briefly in butter. Add salmon, Cheddar and Paremsan cheeses, sour cream and seasonings. Turn into 2-quart casserole and top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.



Why not combine zucchini with luscious canned salmon in a delectable main dish casserole? Quick to prepare, sliced zucchini and garlic are sauteed briefly in butter, then combined with nourishing canned salmon, dairy sour cream, grated Parmesan and Cheddar cheeses and mixed Italian herbs.

BARBECUED BEANS

Cook 1 quart beans in salt water until tender. Soy beans are more tender cooked in a pressure cooker. Drain salt water and add following sauce.

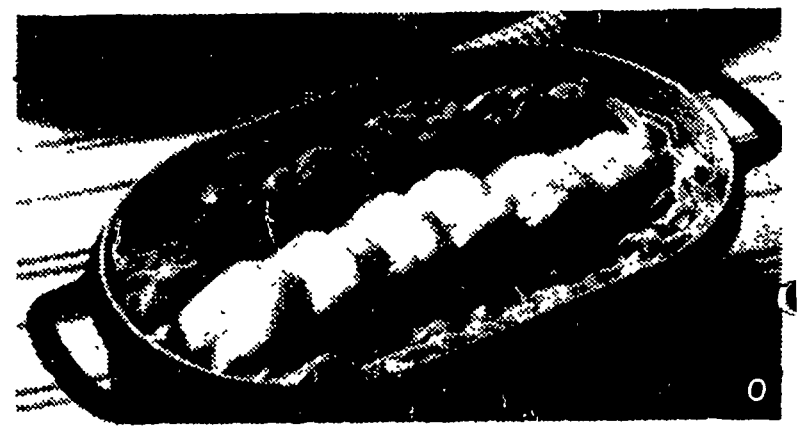
Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or less if beans were hot and tender before adding sauce.

Sauce

2 T. butter
2 medium onions
1 T. vinegar
2 T. brown sugar
1 T. flour
1 c. catsup
1 c. water
ham or bacon

Fry onions in butter, add vinegar, brown sugar and flour. Mix well and add catsup and water. Mix tender beans and sauce and bake.

Katie Ebersol, Paradise



You could serve this pasta casserole to your family every day because it is low in calories and a very healthful dish. There are only 210-220 calories in an average serving. Try it! You'll love the eggplant and the noodles.

1/2 c. stuffing

Mrs. Charles Biehl, Mertztown

Following are answers in response to questions from Cook's Question Corner. You may want to try one of the recipes.

VEGETABLE SOUP

15 c. potatoes diced
2 c. onion, chopped
10 c. carrots, sliced
5 c. peas
5 c. green beans
3 c. corn
2 c. celery, sliced
3 c. lima beans
4 c. tomatoes diced
beef broth, strained or with meat in tomato juice salt and pepper

Mix together all the vegetables and add boiling broth or tomato juice. If you wish, broth or juice may be double strength to make 'condensed' soup to which you'll add water when reheating.

It is better if you do not include the alphabet noodles until you heat to serve as they won't can well.

Divide among quart jars and process 2 1/2 to 3 hours in hot water bath canner (2 1/2 hrs. for tomato juice, 3 hours for meat broth with meat) or if using a pressure canner, process for the length of time recommended for longest time necessary for vegetable.

Mrs. Ralph Todd, Peach Bottom

PUMPKIN CAKE

2 1/4 c. cake flour
3 t. baking powder
1/2 t. salt
1/4 t. soda
1 1/2 t. cinnamon
1/2 t. ginger
1/2 t. allspice
1/2 c. butter
1 c. firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 c. white sugar
2 eggs
3/4 c. buttermilk or sour milk
3/4 c. mashed, cooked pumpkin or squash
1/2 c. finely chopped nut meats

Measure and sift together flour, baking powder, soda, spices. Set aside.

Cream butter, add sugars gradually and cream well. Add eggs, one at a time and beat. Add flour mixture alternately, beating after each addition until smooth. Add pumpkin and nuts. Mix well. Bake in 2 round 8-inch layer pans that have been greased and bottoms lined with greased paper, at 350 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes or until done. Good frosted with butter cream icing.

'Salute to Excellence' honors Md. 4-H leader

COLLEGE PARK — Lillian Murphy kof Ijamsville, a Frederick County volunteer 4-H leader, has been selected as Maryland's representative for the first "Salute to Excellence" forum next month at the National 4-H Center in Chevy Chase, Md.

A farm homemaker, Mrs. Murphy will be among 52 men and women from throughout the nation-including Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia - who are scheduled to participate in a five-day recognition and training session during National 4-H week.

A 4-H member for 10 years, Lillain Murphy won a trip to the National 4-H Congress in Chicago in 1952 as Maryland's representative in the 4-H food preparation project. She has now been a volunteer 4-H leader for 14 years. Her four children are 4-H members, and three of them have won countrywide 4-H honors in recent years.

Last year, Mrs. Murphy helped to organize the Green Valley Go-Getters 4-H Club, which as already earned an achievement seal and has been nominated for the "Outstanding Maryland 4-H Club Award" after only one year of operation.

Last week Lillian Murphy finished her annual stint as superintendent of the 4-H baked goods department at the Federick County fair. She also oversees the 4-H food preservation entries each August at the Montgomery County fair.

She has been involved in many other countywide 4-H leadership or supervisory roles as well. She serves as secretary of the Frederick County 4-H All Stars, an organization which provides manpower and financial support for youth programs.

Mrs. Murphy has been described as "one of the most dependable 4-H leaders in our county, and she has excellent communication skills, especially in writing."

The "Salute to Excellence" forum, which Mrs. Murphy will attend next month, is being supported by a financial grant from R.J. Reynolds Industries, Inc., of Winson-Salem, N.C.

Included in the support package will be incentive grants to help implement back-home action plans for 4-H projects which the program participants may want to initiate as a result of their experience at the forum.

Let's look at food from Italy!

LANCASTER — When you think of Italy, you no doubt visualize the delicious foods this country is noted for: pasta, veal, tomato sauces, manicotti, and eggplant, etc.

This week, Deb Kreider, a Lebanon County representative for the International 4-H Youth Exchange, shared with us her impression of the Italian mealtime. In salute to National 4-H Week, read Deb's report, below, and then her experiences of being an IFYE in a foreign land.

ROME, ITALY — I have discovered that the food differs slightly in each region of Italy and that each region has at least one dish for which it is famous. Also each region has it's own distinctive type of bread.

The Italians eat a very light breakfast. Normally I have a cup of capuccino and biscotti which are similar to cookies. I have also had tea and bread.

Lunch is the largest meal of the day. I have eaten anytime from 12:30 to 1:30 depending on the family.

The first course is always pastascuitta, some type of pasta, or minestra, which is soup.

The second course is meat and vegetables. I have eaten mostly beef and chicken although I also have eaten veal, rabbit and pork many times. I will most likely eat pigeon at least one time before returning home.

In summer, the Italians eat many vegetables. Many times the vegetables are first cooked and then eaten cold with corn oil. The most common vegetable are string beans, tomatoes, peppers, zucchini, eggplant and potatoes. The third course is dessert. I eat a lot of fruit and have eaten "dolce," which are sweets, only a few times.

Dinner is served anytime between 8 and 9. It is very similar to lunch except that we eat no pastascuitta or minestra. For both lunch and dinner there is always at least two bottles of wine on the table.

Yes, I have also eaten pizza many times. When I tell my family that I like pizza very much, they always take me to eat pizza. However, each person gets his own individual pizza.

"What does it mean to be an IFYE in Italy?"

Being an IFYE is...

—spending two hours in the Roman Forum and not seeing everything

—going to St. Peter's Basilica and seeing the Pope

—going to my first host family and upon my arrival discovering that they spoke no Italian-I learned fast!

—taking showers in the milkhouse and having hot water one time

—watching Italy win the World Cup and then celebrating

—tasting grappa for the first time

—participating in a club's 3-p festival by peeling potatoes, making french fries and having a lot of fun

—seeing a Fiat 500 for the first time and wondering how a person could sit in a car so small

—seeing an American war cemetery

—being treated almost like royalty

—picking pears, picking pears, picking more pears and having fun working with the family

—people asking you "Do you like Italy?" relying "Yes" and then having them tell you that you should marry an Italian and stay here

—knowing the reputation of the Italian men and then discovering that your second host family has only one son your age living at home - (no problems)

—watching the entire series of "The Planet of the Apes" in Italian

—going to a Jackson Browne concert, reading on the ticket that cameras are not allowed but having 26 pictures of the concert

—going to Venice and finding out that it is as beautiful as you have heard —accidently seeing your second host mother while with your third family and being greeted with a big hug

—having many Italians telling you that next year they will be coming to the U.S. and will come to visit you

—learning how to make people laugh by speaking in Italian

—living with and knowing the aunt in my second host family (2 families lived in one house) for 10 days and having her wanting you to return before leaving for the United States

—seeing things thousands of years old

—accepting the Italian people and culture, taking everything in stride, not worrying about tomorrow and having lots of fun

Kid's Korner

Farewell, Mr. Blacksmith

Kids here is the third part to our story about a real ol'time blacksmith. The first two parts have appeared in the last two issues. You may want to look them up and read them before going on to part three, if you haven't read them already.

Again, the story was written by Ralph Ratcliff and was submitted by his son Bruce Ratcliff of California. It relates his experiences in the 1900s in Indiana.

There is no such animal as an ungrateful horse. For the scientists who have adjudged horses the dumbest four-legged animals they ever examined, there is a smith who knows this noble, dignified animal could not care less.

A horse will seldom sell you out if you treat him right. The dependability of horses seems to be equal to or better than that of some people.

Aging a horse is telling his age by inspecting his teeth. Up to age 12 you count the rings in the cups of his front teeth. After age 12 the rings are no longer obvious and the horse has a smooth mouth.

At ages one to five, a horse's top and bottom front teeth are in a fairly straight line. At age 22 they are at right angles. Beyond age 12, a horse's age is determined by interpolating from the angle of his front teeth. The horse's birth month is determined by the appearance of his coat. The wooly fur is shed in the spring. He never completely sheds until his birth month.

A fall colt (a horse born in the fall) is essentially worthless as a draft horse. He cannot adequately endure the summer heat or the winter cold. A smith could tell a fall colt from across the street. A fall colt is an accident. There were no fall colts on the western range. If born in the fall, they freeze to death the first winter.

A customer would frequently ask the blacksmith to evaluate and age his team. This had to be done diplomatically. The owner does not wish to have confirmed what he probably already suspects. He may have been swindled when he bought the team. The horse trader is seldom challenged because the buyer is too proud to admit that his personal knowledge of horses is not the very best. If you want to hear an expert on horses, just listen to any horse owner talk to any non horse owner.

In the mid 1920s, many mustangs were shipped into Indiana from the western ranges. This was big business because the farmer could often buy his horses cheaper than he could raise them. The western ranchers gelded their yearling horse colts and introduced Belgian and Clydesdale stallions into the herds thus producing some fine draft animals. Relatively few smiths, including Charlie, in deference to their families, would shoe a mustang team for the first few times. This enabled me to get acquainted with many fine mustang teams. The farmer had only his road team shod. This was always his best team.

Normally a horse liked to be shod, but when he doubts your friendship, you can be in trouble. The horse's teeth are just as strong as they look. If I questioned his friendship, I put a muzzle on him before I started. If the horse was fractious or the horse and smith were afraid of each other, some smiths would have the owner twitch the horse. A twitch consists of a loop of rope placed in a hole in the end of a shank attached to a handle. This loop is placed over the end of a horse's nose and twisted to induce pain. The horse can be put into such severe pain that a foot could be amputated.

While a horse was being twitched I have seen perspiration drip from his belly even on a cold day. I never had the need or stomach for this.

For me, the greatest grief was when a drunk would bring a team to be shod. The following situation generally prevailed:

1. He had pushed them all the way from home because he was in a hurry.
2. They were hot and bothered and in no way ready to be shod.
3. The team was in poor shape.
4. Their hooves were either short and tender or long enough to impede natural walking.
5. After the team was shod, if it was Wednesday, he might inform you he could not pay until the following Tuesday although he knew the terms were cash.

The only reason we ever shod horses for this type of person was out of sympathy for the horse. Many a horse has been killed by a drunken owner because of overworking, overheating or underfeeding. Fortunately a drunken farmer did not last very long. Unfortunately there always seemed to be another of his type to take his place.

When a smith sees a man's horse, he knows several things about the man that cannot be learned by any research. Show me a man's horse and I will quickly tell you whether or not I would choose him for a neighbor.

Kitties galore

Winners in the Lancaster County tractor driving competition at the Ephrata Fair include, from the foreground to background, Dale Bollinger, Cloister Chapter, Ephrata, first, sitting on the Deutz; P. Marlin Mast, Grassland Chapter, New Holland, second, on the Deere; Vernon Heisey, Manheim Chapter, third, on the A-C; and Gary Bitts, Manor Chapter, fourth, standing. Marks wins tractor driving

RED LION — The 1982 Red Lion Chapter FFA tractor driving contest was held recently. Participants in the contest were required to take a written test on tractor operation and maintenance along with inspecting the tractor's fuel, oil, water, brakes, tires, and trouble shooting or looking for faulty parts.

Contestants were observed as they started the tractor and during its operation. They were also observed as they hitched a four wheel wagon to the tractor and backed the wagon into a stall. They were then asked to hitch a manure spreader and drive through on obstacle course, ending by backing the spreader into a stall.

Those placing in the top five category were Melvin Marks, first; Aaron Crowl, second; Rick Mitzel, third; Jim Caudill, fourth; and Ed Keeny, fifth.

FFA exhibits at Food Expo

The Pennsylvania FFA Association and vocational agriculture were represented at the Third Annual Pa. Agricultural Food Exposition held at Bensalem.

The exhibit, prepared and constructed by the Lehigh County FFA Chapter at the Lehigh County Vo-Tech School, depicted the major areas of concern of the Future Farmers of America — its definition, goals, accomplishments and career opportunities.

It was designed as an educational exhibit to inform the public of the roles and functions of vocational agriculture and the FFA.

Cumberland Co. honors 4-H leaders

BY BETH HEMMINGER
Staff Correspondent

CHAMBERSBURG — Cumberland County 4-H youth and Extension Service honored their adult leaders recently at the annual Cumberland County 4-H Leaders Banquet.

For one 4-H leader, it was a grand occasion. That evening, Bill Otto celebrated his 45th year as a 4-H leader in the county-wide baby beef club.

In honor of this outstanding accomplishment, the youth and Extension Service paid a special tribute to Bill Otto's lifetime involvement dedicating the evening's banquet to him by inviting his immediate family, 3 sons and their wives, grandchildren, and his wife Corrinne, to the banquet.

The Extension Service prepared a photo album showing Bill and his family's work in Cumberland County 4-H programs since 1936, when Bill first became a 4-H Leader.

After gifts and recognition Bill remarked, "I couldn't have thought of a better way to spend 45 years. When you see young children who first join a club, afraid to stand up and give a report or even say their name, but after a few years in 4-H they are leading the club pledge, holding offices, showing several animals and organizing committees, it makes it all worthwhile."

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Strock together have worked in 4-H for half a century and were honored at the banquet for their years of dedication. Mabel Strock has been a 4-H sewing and small animal leader for 30 years. During those years she has served on every committee from 4-H Development Committee to the County Fashion Revue.

Clyde Strock has been a community 4-H leader for 20 years and has helped 4-H'ers in the hog, woodworking, and sheep projects.

Pa. Ag Foods Expo reaches 45,000 consumers

BENSALEM — The Third Annual Pennsylvania Agricultural Foods Exposition had plenty of sunshine and fun for 45,000 visitors during its three-day run.

Consumers in the Philadelphia area had a chance to see and taste the variety of products from participating Pennsylvania food exhibitors. Apple juice, milk, chicken dogs, porkburgers, wood fire hamburgers, omelets, baked potatoes and horse radish, were just a part of this annual affair. Visitors also had a chance to taste vine-ripened produce form farmers tailgate markets. Also available to visitors were fresh potted mums, dried flower arrangements and sheepskins.

The expo provided a variety of entertainment. A bluegrass/country theme prevailed for the numerous bands performing. Square dancers got audiences up and dancing to music.

Education played its part in the expo as demonstrations taught visitors about gardening, honey bees, tree tapping, meat cutting and much more. Children had the chance to meet young farm animals face-to-face in the petting zoo.

Prizes made expo visitors happy too! Food prizes were given every half hour by the Bucks County Farms Association. Egg and pie eating contest winners went home with cash prizes. No world records were broken, but show records were set with 25% eggs eaten in 30 minutes during the egg contest. The apple pie eating contest record was two minutes 28 seconds to finish an eight-inch pie.

A cow milking contest pitted State Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell against Bucks County's Congressman James Coyne and State Represent. Edward Burns.

Penn State cops first-place win in A-A dairy judging

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

CAMP HILL — Penn State's dairy judging team placed first in all collegiate division of the All-American Invitational Judging contest for the first time in the contest's 14-year history.

The team was aided in its quest place by team member Paul Knight, Airville, who was the first place individual in all breeds. Melanie Alsdorf, Spartansburg, was fifth in overall placings and was fifth in oral reasons. She was fourth in Guernsey placings. Todd Grice, Washinton, placed first in the Ayrshire breed. Lisa Cooper, Slippery Rock, also was a member of the team.

As a team, the Penn State group placed second in Guernseys and fourth in Holsteins. The team was coming to Harrisburg fresh from a first-place victory at the Eastern States Exposition in Massachusetts. Team coach is Warren Poage.

Twenty-one teams competed in the collegiate division of the contest.

In overall scores, Virginia Tech placed second, Cornell placed third, Cal Poly placed fourth and Michigan State University placed fifth.

A first at this year's contest was the presentation of a rotating trophy for the highest collegiate and 4-H team in oral reasons. The trophy is named for Harry Roth, director of operations for Atlantic Breeders Cooperative, and is given as a tribute to Roth who served as superintendent of the contest for its first twelve years. Roth was on hand to make the presentation to Maryland's 4-H team and to Cornell's collegiate team.

The Harry Roth Trophy for Oral Reasons is sponsored by the coaches of the 4-H and collegiate divisions and in addition to the large rotating trophy the winning team received a smaller replica of the trophy.

According to Charles Itle, manager of the All-American Dairy Show which sponsors the judging contest, this year's event was the largest ever, with 46 teams participating in the three divisions.

Chester County's 4-H team, which placed first at State Days in August, represented Pennsylvania in the 4-H contest. Coached by Jane Pepple, Oxford, the team placed third overall, preceded by Maryland and Illinois.

Pennsylvania's 4-H team was third in Jerseys and fifth in Brown Swiss and Holsteins. Eighteen 4-H teams completed.

Don Stoltzfus, Morgantown, placed eighth in the individual rankings for all breeds. Myron Stoltzfus, also of Morgantown and a cousin of Don's was third in Guernseys and fifth in Jerseys. Tim Kurtz, Elverson, was first in Brown Swiss. Glenn Stoltzfus, a brother to Don, was also a member of the team.

In the FFA division, the Pennsylvania team placed first in Holsteins, with Heidi Von Long placing first in individual reasons. Gary Baity was fourth overall in the Ayrshire breed and fifth in Guernseys. Gary Shade placed fourth in Guernseys.

The team finished fifth overall, and placed fourth in Brown Swiss and fifth in Ayrshire and Jerseys.

Gary Shade, center, and his coach Ronald L. Yeger accept an award from Merle Miller, left. The Pennsylvania FFA team placed first in Holsteins and fifth in the overall competition at the All-American Dairy judging contest held in Harrisburg this week. Seven FFA teams participated.

Paul Knight, right, accepts an award from Merle Miller representing the All-American Dairy Show, for placing first in individuals in the collegiate division of the invitational judging contest held this week in Harrisburg. Knight, Airville, was a member of the Penn State team which placed first in the contest.

Harry Roth, left, presents the rotating trophy presented in his name for the high collegiate and 4-H judging teams in oral reasons during the All-American judging contest. The high Maryland team is, from left, Mike Hall, Lisa Bond, Linda Calton, Janet Stiles, Coach Lee J. Majeskie, Sapienza Majeskie and Kevin Leaverton.

The first place FFA team was Virginia, second place was Maryland, third was Ohio and fourth was New York. Seven teams competed in that division.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

The month just past is always one of the busiest of the year for me. In fact, September rivals June, when I must pick sugar peas and strawberries most everyday.

The cellar shelves are now loaded with colorful cans of peaches, pears, plums and tomatoes. Interspersed with these are two kinds of pickles that consume lots of my time. Whenever I have a little extra time, I pick red raspeberries as they seem to bear forever.

My Kentucky Wonder beans have now reached the point where I'm giving them away. They are so straight, green and uniform that they would be a fine entry in a country fair. I've already frozen 80 quarts of them. Enough is enough; although I suppose my children will be glad for some of them.

Another September job that used some of my time was picking up Black Walnuts and then hulling them. I simply hit them gently with a hammer to remove the hull. Some people put them through a corn sheller while other lay them on the driveway and allow cars to drive over them. Quite a few are broken with this latter method. The other week a man from Oklahoma was visiting us and suggested using a board with two holes carved in it. The walnuts are placed on top and then tapped so that they fell through and leave the hulls behind.

Each fall I dry flowers which I later arrange in small vases. Even some of the weeds and grasses are dried as their seed heads have interesting shapes. I place the flowers head down in a mixture of borax, cornmeal and uniodized salt. Most of them retain their color quite well.

This time of year, with the lawn full of fallen leaves, reminds me to dig and store the gladiolas, dahlias, tuberoses, Persian lilies and many other bulbs. The 100-foot row of sweet potatoes won't be dug until frost kills the plants. This year I grew my own red and white potatoes and was very pleased with the harvest We also had an unending supply of watermelons and cantaloupes.

There is very little spare time around there during this extra busy season of the year.

Will your children survive a fire?

LANCASTER — Most children are helpless to save themselves in a fire. Without parents and other grown-ups to guide them, children make deadly mistakes. Yet you can't be sure you will be with your children when fire breaks out.

What you can do is give your children a plan of action to follow in case a fire begins at home. Once you have established a plan, then everyone in the house should practice what to do.

Terror, bewilderment, and panic can lead to death — unless these can be controlled by knowing what to do. An automatic response for safety is the best way to give your children a chance for survival.

Involve the whole famly in a discussion of how to escape from a fire. Each room should have two escape routes, especially the bedrooms where children are likely to be trapped. Don't depend entirely on using the stairway because these can fill with heat and deadly smoke. Always have an alternate route from bedrooms.

Inspect all the windows and select the ones most suitable for escape such as those over a garage or porch roof. Even a window with a sturdy trellis or tree just outside may do in an emergency. If getting to the ground is unsafe, a child can be instructed to wait in the fresh air or a designated window for rescue.

Decide who will help the young children, elderly, or infirm members of the household and plan on where to meet after escape so no one risks going back inside to rescue someone already safe.

Here are a few drills to help build an automatic response for children:

—Smoke! On that alarm, children should grab some thick material — pillow or a towel — and place it over their mouths and noses. They should then move as fast they can in a crouch position, avoiding deep breaths and go in the direction of their escape route. Smoke is the number one killer in home fires.

—Get out fast! On that command, time them from their beds, through their escape route to the safety point outside.

On the way out, they should test the door for heat, because if it's hot it means there may be flames and deadly gases on the other side. After they have mastered this drill, add a few complications such as a string in front of the stairs so they will know to try the second escape route.

Practice going out a window and talk about how to break the window open if they can't get it open. Practice using rope ladders if you have them and waiting on the porch roof for you to get the ladder if that's part of your plan.

Clothes on fire is another drill to help children survive. Let them pretend they are on fire and have them roll up in a blanket, rug, or any other large heavy cloth available. They must never run if their clothes are on fire because the breeze will fan the flame.

Guide your children for safety now — teach them how to survive a fire at home.

Martin ewe lamb emerges as Ephrata Fair Champ

BY SHEILA MILLER

EPHRATA — Seventeen-year-old Barry Martin of R1 East Earl, Lancaster County, crouched confidently next to his Suffolk ewe lamb, waiting for Judge Terry Coon's selection of first-place lamb in the third class of Suffolk-sired market lambs during last Wednesday evening's Ephrata Fair.

After emerging as the blue-ribbon winner despite tough competition against seven class entries, Martin had only just enough time to catch his breath before he and his lamb were pitted against the other two-first place Suffolk lambs — one a stablemate owned by Barry, the other belonging to Jeff Martin of R1 Ephrata. Still Barry held the lamb that had captured the judge's attention, and after a few moments deliberation, Coon, a graduate student at Penn State, gave Barry the nod which indicated his lamb was champion Suffolk.

As Martin and his lamb waited, the remaining first-place entries representing five other sheep breeds lined up in the straw bale-encircled show ring to see who would be grand champion of this year's Ephrata Fair Lamb Show.

After handling and critically observing more than 53 lambs, Judge Coon awarded the top honors to Martin's "powerful" lamb. She explained her selection reflected her choice of a lamb that was "progressive" and would "make more money" for any producer.

"This is the type of lamb people should be striving to raise," said Coon, while praising the lamb's "meatiness and thickness."

Martin, the son of John A. and Marilyn Martin, is a junior at Garden Spot High School where he is a member of the FFA and a Star Chapter Farmer. Quarter horses and sheep are the principal livestock raised on the family's 28-acre farm.

The family's sheep flock numbers roughly 50 head, with 30 breeding ewes. Martin explained he began raising sheep six years ago after getting interested through school work. About 75 percent of the flock is purebred Suffolk.

This is not the first time Martin has felt the intense scrutiny of a sheep judge in the ring, having won reserve champion honors twice at the Elizabethtown Fair along with grand champion showman. But this is the first time in his six-year history of Ephrata competition that he has exhibited the grand champion lamb, a happy Martin reflected, adding quietly that his older sister, Deb, had won top honors here three years ago.

Martin also exhibited the Ephrata Fair's champion carcass lamb on foot and rail, and Deb showed the reserve champion carcass lamb on foot. Jason Garman of R1 Ephrata exhibited the reserve champion carcass lamb on the rail.

A newcomer to the show ring and sheep production, fifteen-year-old John Spangler and his parents, Richard and Annabelle Spangler of Lititz were elated when Judge Coon went to his Suffolk x Hampshire ewe lamb for Reserve Grand Champion honors. Spangler's lamb followed Martin's to the championship circle, placing second to the grand champion Suffolk lamb in class, standing as reserve champion Suffolk, and finally reserve grand overall.

Judge Coon praised both lambs' uniform finishes, stating emphatically that she "would put either one of them on my plate."

This is the first experience Spangler, a sophomore and FFA member at Warwick High School, has had in raising and showing sheep. He purchased two ewe lambs, including his reserve grand champ, from McDonald's Farm of R2 Palmyra.

Neither of John's parents had raised sheep before this year and both admitted it would be hard to sell them since the lambs had become a family focal point. John and his parents worked together with vocational agriculture teacher Sonia Shaner in learning the basics of sheep production — and everyone got involved in the project.

A beamingly proud Shaner congratulated young Spangler on his accomplishment. "It's thrilling to me," she said enthusiastically, pointing out that she was the only teacher who had worked with John on this project.

In the fitting and showmanship competition, Lynn Crills, 16, of R2 Ephrata was awarded the champion fitter honors. Lynn is a junior at Ephrata High School and serves as chaplain for the Cloister FFA chapter. This was Lynn's first lamb project and he said he plans to "take another lamb next year" and ply his hand at the sheep shears again.

Fourteen-year-old Kent Halsey of Bowmansville demonstrated his showmanship skills and captured champion showman honors in a contest that pitted the young sheep producer against his older cousin, Brian Hurst and beginner showman Jeff Martin.

Kent, who is a ninth grade FFA member at Garden Spot, said this is his third year "working with lambs," having taken them as his first ag project during sixth grade. Now, raising Corriedale sheep has become somewhat of a hobby for Kent who explains he kept one of his original ewe lambs for breeding stock. "I was going to butcher her but I got too attached," he confessed with a grin.

Kent is the son of Charles and Muriel Halsey.

The champion pen of market lambs was exhibited by eighteen-year-old Steve Moyer, a graduate of Ephrata High School and a member of the Cloister FFA. His winning entries, a three-way cross between a Suffolk ram and a Dorset x Rambouillet ewe, were purchased from Dutch Valley Farms, Manheim.

At Ephrata Fair

Liz Chapman wins 3rd hog title

EPHRATA — Liz Chapman's successful 4-H career, now drawing near an end, can boast at least three hog show grand championships, with the promise that she'll be trying next week to add yet a fourth trophy where it all started four years ago.

The third grand championship came at last week's Ephrata Fair where her 230-pound, three-way cross caught the eye of judge Larry Arnold when it first came into the ring and must have remained in the back of his mind through the presentation of the show's top trophy.

Seventeen-year-old Liz started her trio of grand championships four years ago at her hometown Manheim Farm Show.

Sandwiched between that initial top finish and her latest grand championship was her 4-H Roundup win last year, when younger sister, Chris, took the reserve grand championship.

And on Monday, it's back to the Manheim Farm Show, where she'll once again assume the favorite's role and seek her fourth top win.

Liz also had a mediumweight in the competition that finished second in its class.

"The heavyweight was the better hog," she said.

"It was heavier-muscled and a broader pig."

It addition to depth of frame and obviously lots of red meat on the hoof, the winning Landrace-Yorkshire-Duroc cross that came out of the Dutch Valley Farms stock was also a tall animal that literally stood head and shoulders above the other entries.

Younger sister, Chris, who soon will assume the family's sole 4-H showring responsibility, had a couple of major wins, too. Chris had the mediumweight reserve champion and captured the junior showing title.

The reserve show championship honors went to the Duroc-X mediumweight of Jim Musser. F1 Ephrata, who graduated from the Cloister FFA last year.

An employee of Hamilton Equipment, Ephrata, the 18-year-old moved into the show championship winner's circle for the first time in five years of showing. His best previous showing at Ephrata and the roundup were some class and weight division wins.

Hogs average 79 cents

EPHRATA — Spirited bidding at the Junior Market Hog Sale at the Ephrata Fair paid off for the youthful exhibitors as the sale average reached 79 cents per pound, not including the grand and reserve champions.

Hatfield Packing bought both of the champions, paying $3.25 a pound to Liz Chapman, R5 Manheim, for her grand champion and $2.80 a pound to Jim Musser, R1 Ephrata, for his reserve champion.

In all, Hatfield bought 30 of the 63 hogs in the sale.

Other buyers included Emery Buying Station, Ephrata; Cloister Restaurant, H.D. Matz dairy cattle; Walter Dunlap and Sons, Henry Hoover Agway, Agri. Inc., Sensenig's Feed Mill, New Holland Sales Stables and Terry Sheetz.

Dairy show is time to think

EPHRATA — What do you think about as you prepare your animal for dairy show competition, put her through her paces to a class win and then wait expectantly as she competes for the grand championship?

For John W. Zimmerman, R1 Ephrata, his thoughts were centered on that big step that all farmers must take at one time or another – going on your own.

The three-year-old, Zimbridge Molly Spring Cowie, that won the Holstein grand championship for him at the Ephrata Fair last week, will be part of the herd of 23 he'll be taking to the farm he'll be renting along the Churchtown Road at Narvon in December.

And what new prefix will be coming on the Lancaster County dairy scene?

"We were just discussing that tonight," explains his bride-to-be, Diane Weaver.

"We think it will be Narvon Valley," Zimmerman said.

Miss Weaver will be taking her two Ayrshires along to add to the herd, which the couple hopes to increase to about 40

It was the second consecutive Ephrata Fair win for Zimmerman, who won with an aged cow last year. It was his last year of FFA competition.

In Ayrshire competition, Larry L. Gerhart, R2 Reinholds, won the grand championship with a four-year-old, Jumbo June Alice.

Ephrata steer show has similarities

EPHRATA — The grand and reserve champions at the Junior Steer Show of the Ephrata Fair had a lot in common.

Naturally, they had different owners, but both were young ladies and both veterans of the show ring despite being in only their early-teens.

The grand championship went to 14-year-old Emily Weaver, of R1 Ephrata, who had her first top award in six years of 4-H showing.

The reserve championship went to 15-year-old Margaret Herr, of R2 Narvon, an FFA veteran not only with beef but with sheep, too.

Both of the animals came out of the light heavy class and only 20 pounds separated their respective weights.

Both were Angus-based – the grand champion a Chianina cross and the reserve a purebred.

Both came from Rally Farms, Millbrook, N.Y.

Both were reserve champions at the New Jersey Angus Field Day in July in their respective cross and purebred competition.

Both will be going head to head again in the Lancaster County Roundup next month, with the same goal of the respective owners to continue on to Harrisburg in January.

So, the task of judge Steve Upperman, recent Penn State graduate now working at Em-Tran, was sifting through the similarities as he finally gave the nod to the slightly larger-framed cross over the purebred.

Editor's Note: With this issue of Lancaster Farming we begin yet another endeavor to bring you, the industrious, creative and well-organized reader, a corner which we're sure is destined to become a favorite for many.

Look for this corner every week as you flip through Section B and give the crafts a whirl. Some weeks will offer sewing tips and other times you may find yourself growing bonsai plants or decorating glass. Always, there will be illustrations to guide you as you produce your craft.

So sit back this week and learn how to make Yo-yo mats and napkins; then include them on your Christmas list as an inexpensive but unique gift for a dear friend.

Yo-yo mats

Patchwork lovers will no doubt love "yo-yos." Like patchwork pieces, yo-yos are fabric scraps that combine to form placemats, pillows, other home accessories and unique fashions.

Despite the name, yo-yos don't really resemble the toys they're named for. Rather, a yo-yo is a circle of fabric, stitched around the edges and gathered tightly. A finished yo-yo closely resembles a shower cap, only smaller.

To make yo-yo placemats or other projects, you simply arrange several yo-yos on a flat surface, tack them together and press. Large squares of fabric make perfect matching napkins.

A

Here are directions for yo-yo placemats and napkins:

MATERIALS: Assorted fabric scraps, preferably cotton or cotton blends; compass; stain-retardant spray such as Scotchgard; sewing supplies; iron.

For two matching napkins; on-half yard cotton or cotton-blend fabric, or two 16x16-inch squares.

PREPARATION: 1. To avoid shrinkage, wash all fabrics twice. 2. Press fabrics.

CUTTING: 1. Using your compass, draw at least 50 5-inch circles on right side of fabric scraps. 2. Again using your compass, draw a 4½-inch circle inside each 5-inch circle. 3. Cut out 5-inch circle.

STITCHING: 1. On each circle, fold under ¼-inch hem, using your inner line to guide you. Baste. 2. Stitch down hem with long, gathering machine stitches or hand-sewn running stitches (a). 3. Gather stitches tightly. Tie loose ends together (b).

ASSEMBLING PLACEMATS: 1. Press each yo-yo flat. 2. Arrange yo-yos to form a placemat, approximately 13x17 inches. 3. Tack yo-yos together where they touch one another. 4. Spray mats with stain retardant.

NAPKINS: 1. For each napkin, cut one 16x16-inch square. 2. Turn under ⅓-inch hem. Baste. 3. turn under additional ¼-inch hem. Machine-stitch hem in place.

The PRIME LINE

Ladies Have You Heard?

By Doris Thomas
Lancaster Extension Home Economist

MAKE TIME FOR YOUR KIDS

The big rush is over. You and your children are more or less settled into school-schedules and after school routines — or are you? Many family sociologists believe that today's busy families have a tendency to over-schedule activities.

Too often, schedules are so tight, there is not enough time for parents and children to talk about the school day and share thoughts, problems and pleasures. Your child needs your support and encouragement to do well in school. He or she needs your time and attention throughout the year. Here is how you can help:

Plan your day so that you can spend some time with each of your children. This can be a special time before school, after work, at bedtime or during a quiet snack after school. This should be a regularly scheduled time, not just something you squeeze in between other activities.

Praise your children for work well done. Sometimes we take the good for granted and focus only on poor performance and behavior. Praise and encouragement, not punishment and anger, are the building blocks for success and self-confidence.

Give your children free time at home after school. Do not fill each afternoon with some structured activity. Your children have had enough of that during school hours and may well need time to relax, digest the day and not be pressured to perform.

Resist the temptation to solve your children's quarrels or difficulties with school friends. Let your children learn how to work out differences with friends as long as they are not hurting each other.

Help your children cope with occasional frustrations and disappointments at school. The first and most important thing you can do is to listen. You are there to help, not to give your children the impression you can solve everything. Children need to learn to cope and to do the problem solving.

Avoid comparing abilities and achievements of any of your children with others in the neighborhood or with brothers and sisters. Each child is different with special abilities and individual interests.

A hug and a kiss and a listening ear are three of the most important things you can add to your children's school day. So make sure you allow time for these and time to talk, share and enjoy.

Dove season split

HARRISBURG — Pennsylvania's 1982-83 hunting year got underway Sept. 1 when wing-shooters got their first chance at mourning doves. Gallinules and two species of rails also are huntable.

Dove season has been split into two segments. In the first, from Sept. 1 through Oct. 11, shooting hours are noon until sunset. In the second, from Oct. 30 through Nov. 27, shooting hours are from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset. The lone exception is Oct. 30 when all hunting begins at 9 a.m. Gallinules and rails are legal through Nov. 9 from one-half before sunrise until sunet.

Twelve doves may be harvested each day, with a possession limit of 24. Gallinules are limited to 15 a day with a possession limit of 30. On Virginia and sora rails, the daily and possession limit is 25 - single or combined species. In Pennsylvania, there is no open season on king and clapper rails.

Soybean loan, purchase rate set at $5.02

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The final loan and purchase rate for 1982-crop soybeans will be $5.02 per bushel, the same as the preliminary rate announced earlier and the minimum permitted by law, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

Everett Rank, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, said all producers of 1982-crop soybeans will be eligible for loans and purchases since USDA does not require farmers to participate in production adjustment programs as a condition of eligibility.

He said current law provides for the loan rate to be at a level equal to 75 percent of the simple average price received by farmers during the past five years, excluding the high and low years, but not less than $5.02 per bushel.

PIONEER®
BRAND SEEDS

PIONEER®
BRAND·SEED CORN

Most farmers agree... with Pioneer® brand hybrids there's less risk, no matter how you spread it.

Spreading the risk has become standard procedure on most farms. By planting several Pioneer® brand hybrids, each genetically different, your odds are better no matter what the weather decides to do. That's why it's such a good idea to include these Pioneer numbers on your farm.

This hybrid is bred for high yield potential. It has excellent stalks, seedling vigor, cob structure and high test weight. It compares to 3780 in maturity. During several growing seasons, 3747 has done a very good job on lighter soils where stresses have occurred. It may be planted at higher densities for top yields under irrigation. 3747 is well-adapted to Pennsylvania. Put 3747 in your "package" of leader hybrids.

3358

Every new hybrid should yield this good. 3358 outperformed every Pioneer hybrid it was tested against last season. This surprised a lot of people — but not those Pioneer corn breeders who have been closely observing 3358. Compared to competitors in 423 tests over a two year period, 3358 yielded 14.5 bushels per acre more corn at the same moisture. It averaged 6% stalk lodging compared to 12% for the competitors. A limited supply of 3358 is expected by 1983.

3535

Here's a real pacemaker that often "leads the pack" in its area of adaption. 3535 simply makes more corn than competitive hybrids of similar maturity. And at harvest it shells out load after load of medium hard textured, high test weight grain with a high yield to moisture level. Growers like its excellent standability and "stay green". It dries down fast to help make greater fuel savings. Include 3535 in your "package" of Pioneer hybrids.

3184

This hybrid is tough when it gets rough. 3184 shows tremendous resistance to drouth. It's adapted to most any soil type and farming practice. Growers like the seedling vigor and stalk quality. It performs best at populations of 19-23,000 plants per acre. 3184 is a real high yielding winner in southern Pennsylvania. This is a true "leader" hybrid... include it in your package of proven winners.

Flory brothers sweep York 4-H Lamb Roundup

James Dealaman bid the final $2 per pound for Tim Flory's Dorset and overall lamb roundup champion.

STEWARTSTOWN — Tim and Tom Flory made a clean sweep of the York 4-H Lamb Roundup, held Monday evening at Sechrist Auction.

Tim's champion 90-pound Dorset entry topped his brother's winning crossbred for the overall grand champion honors, and sold to Dealaman Enterprises, Inc. of Warren, New Jersey, for $2 per pound.

Dealaman purchased Tom Flory's reserve winner as well for $1.24 per pound, and bought a total of 23 head from the annual Roundup.

Other buyers included Carnation Feeds, Spangler and Sprenkle, Robert Kinsley Construction Company, Joe Lehman, Andy Schmidt and Bill Nichols.

The Roundup sale grossed $2267.96 on the 29 head sold, averaging $77.27 per hundred with the champ, and $71.83 without the champion figure. Average weight on the animals was 101.2 pounds. Bill Holloway of York judged the 4-H Roundup classes.

In the breed classes of the Lamb Roundup, Alicia Strausbaugh won the Hampshire honors, while Cheviot awards went to John Krout.

Mike Arendt's heavyweight Southdown edged over Greg Bankert's lighter entry for the champion rosette, and Jim Caudill's crossbred stood in the reserve crossbred spot behind Flory's champion and overall reserve.

Caudill took the top spot in the Shropshire division, over reserve winner Leslie King.

In the Dorset classes, Tim Flory's breed champion, and then overall champ, bested the reserve winner of Lisa Dobrosky.—JB

Pa. state dairy princess

She didn't think she could win the local pageant

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — When she woke to face the last day of dairy princess judging at the Penn Harris last week, dairy farm daughter Jolene Snyder never dreamed that by day's end she'd be wearing the state banner and sparkling tiara.

Of course, the pretty blonde high school senior had already reigned for three months over dairy events in Beaver and Lawrence counties, after the bi-county pageant back in June. That made this, her last summer as a high school student, a busy one, with pitching in at choretime on the Joseph Snyder family farm, exhibiting her 4-H animals, handing out ribbons at several fairs and waiving to hometown parade spectators.

Ironically, there had been some doubt in Jolene's mind about even entering the local pageant, even though several people had approached her about becoming a contestant.

"I'd really been unsure about running, because I didn't think I had a chance," she confesses, looking back. "But then after being crowned, I decided that if I was going to do the job, I was going to do the job the very best I could."

Part of that immediate task was polishing a skit that could be used for the princess training seminar in July and also be presented to those school and community appearances lined up in the promotion schedule.

Inspiration came from the barn cats that populate the Snyder's dairy farm at R3 Volant. Creating a cat costume, complete with whiskers, and adding a background of the taped sounds of pulsators and vacuum pumps, Jolene's "Real Seal barn cat" confides to the audience why she's patiently sitting waiting for the chores to be done for a meal of nature's most nearly perfect food.

It's a presentation guaranteed to grab the attention of the age group most near and dear to the new princess: children.

"I like most working with children," she explains, "because if you make more milk more appealing to them, you're convincing the consumers of the future. And they'll encourage their parents to use it."

Jolene's enjoyment of youngsters carries over into her United Presbyterian church congregation in Pine Grove, where she helps teach the under-five nursery class.

It's also lending some influence to plans he's making for further schooling, after finishing her senior year at Wilmington High School. Those plans center around nursing training, the field in which Jolen's immediate goal is to earn her bachelor's degree.

Then, she speculates focusing on pediatrics and physical therapy, eventually to work into a career of one-to-one rehabilitation therapy for youngsters.

"My mother's a nurse, and I've seen the caring of people involved in nursing," Jolene says of her career choice. She's even gotten in a few years of related practical diagnosis and treatment experience, helping raise the baby calves from the dairy herd.

Actively involved in numerous school, church and 4-H programs, Jolene's background and interests have served as a sort of training ground for the dairy products promotional role she'll play out over the next twelve months.

Jolene and state dairy promotion coordinator Sue Beshore brighten their decorative dairy displays with colorful posters.

Cows and calves have been a part of growing up for princess Jolene, who trades her crown and banner for work clothing at barn chore time.

For eight years, she's carried dairy projects in 4-H, and is president of the county's advanced dairy club. Working with her own three cows and two heifers, as well as helping with the care and feeding of the family's 100-head herd of Holsteins, gives practical background in handling animals she'll work with on promotion visits.

High school and 4-H speech participation has helped boost Jolene's ability to think and speak in an impromptu presentation. She studied speech in school, and as a 4-H public speaking contestant represented Lawrence County at State Days at the university.

An avid sports enthusiast, Jolene's obvious good health and fitness add to her clean-cut natural attractiveness and warm personality. She's had a softball bat in her hand since the age of eight, and plays regularly for the church team. Swimming gets the vote as her second favorite personal sport.

She's a third-year varsity cheerleader, helping to boost school spirit at Wilmington events. In fact, upon arriving home late last Friday evening after a week of pageant and All-American dairy show appearances, Jolene immediately headed for the school's football game.

Word of her crowning had gotten there ahead of Jolene, and the crowd momentarily abandoned team cheers for a rousing welcome of congratulations.

Her return lasted just a few short days, just long enough to catch up on homework, repack her luggage and then head for New York on Tuesday morning for an appearance at the annual meeting of NEDCO, the Northeast Dairy Cooperative. Several similar appearances have already been penciled on her calendar for the next few months.

Back home in Lawrence County, sister Jill, 15, and 14-year-old brother Scott, will help fill in at chore time on the 250-acre operation, and final outside field work of putting away the corn and hay for the dairy herd.

While the glamour and lights of some of the big cities of the East Coast will be part of Jolene's itinerary for the remainder of her reign, she's adamant they'll never lure her away from country life.

"Once you've lived on a farm, or even just out in the country, I can't imagine ever living in the city."

With the selection of Jolene Snyder, Pennsylvania dairy farmers can rest assured that their dairy princess program is serving them well.

Baltimore's Inner Harbor to be site of livestock sale

BALTIMORE, Md. — Baltimore's Inner Harbor will become an auction block for about 35 head of champion livestock raised by youths from across the country at the Sale of Champions Friday, Oct. 8, from noon to 2 p.m.

"This program stimulates youth involvement in 4-H and FFA livestock projects," says John W. Wildesen, Eastern National Livestock Show manager. "It gives them an opportunity to learn not only about the livestock industry, but also about decision-making, economics, interaction with others and sportsmanship. And it teaches the general public more about the most important single staple of its diet."

Representatives from Maryland's business community, as well as other interested individuals, will bid on the livestock, providing a source of encouragement to youths participating in this and similar 4-H and FFA programs.

In addition, Baltimore television personalities Andy Barth, WMAR-TV, Channel 2, Ray Bennett, WBAL-TV, Channel 11, and Bob Sokolar, WJZ-TV, Channel 13, will auction three animals donated to the auction. One half of the proceeds collected for these animals will go to the charity of each personality's choice and the other half will go to the Eastern National Livestock Show so that this program can be continued next year.

The Sale of Champions is made possible through the joint effort of Harborplace, Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Eastern National Livestock Show and is sponsored in part by The Rouse Company and United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company.

AeroDry™
COMPUTERIZED GRAIN MANAGEMENT

"I've had this system for four seasons now. I feel this is the way to go for anyone who wants to dry and store grain.

I've put up to 35% moisture corn in my system, and there's no babysitting and hardly any maintenance. I've consistently taken 25,000 bu. (level full) out of each of my 22,000 bu. bins."

If fuel prices increase by only 15% per year, in 10 years your fuel bill for only 10,000 bushels will be $7500.00. THAT'S A FACT!

Electricity for AeroDry fans would be only $1,750!! (At the same rate of increase)

So - it's your choice, invest in a proven AeroDry System today, and pay it off in perhaps 3 years - or invest your money with no return in the gas company.

Shaw Brothers buy Huntingdon livestock champs

Pictured with the Grand Champion Steer of the Huntingdon Fair are Mr. & Mrs. Shaw of Shaw Brothers Penn Pack Meats, Newry, Blair County. They purchased the grand champion Charolais from Lisa Espy of Spruce Creek for $3,374. The 1400-pound steer sold for $2.49 per pound.

HUNTINGDON — Shaw Brothers Penn Pack Meats of Newry, Blair County made a clean sweep in the purchase of the champions at the recent Huntingdon County Fair.

Shaw, Brothers paid $2.41 a pound, which exceeded Huntingdon's McDonald's bid, for the 1,400-pound Grand Champion Baby Beef shown by Lisa Espy of Spruce Creek. They also purchased the 255-pound Grand Champion Hog shown by Mike Smith, Star Route, Alexandria for $5 a pound; and the 110-pound Grand Champion Lamb shown by Jim Price, Jr., R1, Allensville for $2.15 a pound.

Shaw Brothers have supported the Huntingdon County Livestock Sales for several years, but never before purchased all three champions. They have been a consistent supporter of the Huntingdon 4-H and FFA Livestock Champions Program.

Mrs. Shaw poses with the grand champion lamb shown by Jim Price, Jr. of R1 Allensville at the 1982 Huntingdon County Fair. The 110-pound lamb sold for $2.15 pounds or a total of $236.50 (Photos courtesy of Barry Grubb, Daily News)

4-H celebrates its own National Week

I pledge:
My head to clearer thinking,
My heart to greater loyalty,
My hands to larger service,
My health to better living for my club, my community, my country and my world.

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

Lancaster — Innumerable youngsters, from the lighthouse land of Maine to the redwood forests of California, from the Mexican border to the Canadian, have pledged these words; and to each, the words took on a special and particular meaning that only they could decipher.

Four-H, the youth phase of the Cooperative Extension Service, and a club dedicated to incorporating the head, heart, hands and health of all its members, is celebrating its heritage and progress this week — a week annually circled on 4-H calendars and christened 'National 4-H Week.'

But more important than the progress it can boast, is the potential it has for the future of America's youth. National 4-H Week is observing new beginnings according to Extension agents and the national 4-H headquarters in Chevy Chase, Maryland. Called a "week of beginnings," the time is set aside for members to seek new knowledge, acquire life skills, and build on personal strengths.

Pennsylvania has over 3,200 4-H groups throughout the state, with over 150 of these groups located in Lancaster County, making this locality an instigator in both membership and projects.

Four-H has come a long way since the time of mockery when urban neighbors would laugh at their country cousins for joining such a structured and patriotic organizaton. Today, only a small percentage of members still hail from a farm or rural area, making the projects of farm animals, crops, gardening, and horticulture, novel projects in which to participate.

And if you're thinking that these projects are the only ones offered (in addition to cooking and sewing, of course), then guess again.

Remember embryology — that dreaded course in biology in high school and college you were forced to sit through but could never understand? That is a 4-H project.

Have you priced furniture lately? Are you thinking that furniture-making must indeed be a unique craft? Well, it is, and it's also a 4-H project under the title of 'handyman.'

Having trouble training your dog? Wish you would have studied nutrition because you worry about your family's eating habits? Ever complain when your car repair bills come and they're twice the price you expected? Can you deliver a clear, comprehensible speech? You could do all these things had you taken the 4-H projects offered in these fields.

Perhaps the most beneficial aspect of 4-H, aside from the fun, the friendships and the responsibility gained, is that many 4-H'ers have found their chosen careers thanks to a project they completed sometime during their youth. Clothing projects can lead to careers in modeling, and fasion designing; veterinary and livestock projects can lead to careers in veterinary medicine, farming, and zoo work; speech and photography can lead to careers in politics, business, journalism or teaching. . .

And the list goes on as do the rewards earned and the experiences gained.

Help Lancaster Farming salute 4-H, the club of our youth, by volunteering to be a leader, sponsoring a project, making a donation or congratulating a 4-H'er. After all, they're doing projects not only for their own gain, but also for that of the club, the community, the country and the world.

On being a farm wife -And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

It's generally agreed that farm life these days, has become infinitely more complicated then it was back in grandma and grandpa's era.

Gone forever is the time of the general, self-sufficient homestead, isolated from populous areas, with its half-dozen cows, batch of hogs for butchering, flock of barnyard hens, hand pumps, threshing crews, and putting up all the food for the family's needs for the winter.

Instead, we have bigness and buttons, tempermental mechanical devices replacing balky mules, high moisture corn and haylage, Ag Bags, microwaved meals and mom fixing dinner after returning from her second job away from home.

Along with these visible changes are those more subtle ones, among them the laments about neighborliness missing from modern rural life.

We've watched a sprawling housing development come into being just a hundred yards from our dairy barn in the past few years before the construction boom became a bust. A certain amount of nervousness on our part accompanied the transformation of the wooded home for squirrels and pheasants into a bustling center of young couples, children, bikes, flower beds and tidy lawns.

You can bet that when our heifers make their occasional, inevitable, escapes, we hustle them back with more concern than if next-door was still a pasture.

All in all, though, we've found pleasure in our new neighbors fleeing urban areas, and many of them have taken real interest in the farm, stopping by with their children to visit the cows, calves and two dozen kittens.

Some will call if they see a cow calving in the pasture, and one section of the street parallel to the pasture fence last year more or less adopted an independent-minded bantam hen who chose that corner of the farm in which to set up housekeeping.

But it was another chicken that caused the latest interplay between farm and town outlooks.

News of the incident came in a neatly-typed business letter that arrived last week after we'd been on the cattle show treadmill for a couple of weeks. While the address was recognizable as nearby, the name was unfamiliar.

However, as I scanned the letter and spotted the words "dog" and "property," I could feel my pulse quicken with dread (The few incidents we've ever had dealt with dogs.)

Had Fritz gone visiting again? Even after his operation?

But relief, in this case, was spelled T-H-E-I-R dog.

Seems a neighbor's pooch had fled home over onto our property. And when the owners finally located her, she was in the midst of harassing one of our banty hens.

The jist of the letter was that, while they did not know what had happened to the chicken, and had been unable to reach us by phone, these folks were offering to pay for a bird that may well be alive and healthily scratching for a living behind the machine shed.

If farmer's neighbors were all this considerate there'd be no need for those nuisance laws we recently passed.

Pa. team wins 'Big E' livestock judging contest

WEST CHESTER — The Pennsylvania Livestock Judging Team, consisting of Eileen Fairburn, Nelson Beam, Bill MacCauley and Don Cairns, all from Chester County, was the first place team at the recent Eastern States Livestock Exposition 4-H Judging Contest at Springfield.

This was the first of a number of regional contests the team will participate in before going to the national contest in Louisville, Kentucky, in November. The team competed against 13 other teams from various states in the northeast. Nelson Beam, oldest member of the team and son of Mr. and Mrs. Omar Beam, Elverson, had a spectacular day, placing third high individual overall and winning high individual honors in beef cattle judging.

Bill MacCauley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill MacCauley, Atglen, was fifth high individual overall followed by Don Cairns of Sadsburyville who was sixth high individual overall and high individual in sheep judging. The team captured top honors in beef and sheep judging and was third high team in swine judging.

The team is being supported by a variety of local and state-wide businesses.

York tags open swine show champs

YORK — Melisssa Peters pulled a double win in the York Fair swine shows, capturing the champion barrow overall banner after her purebred Duroc also has copped reserve top honors in the FFA market hog competition.

Returning to the livestock ring, the R2 Stewartstown young lady then got the judge's nod with her champion overall pair, also Durocs.

Reserve placing in both went to John Strawbridge, Stewartstown.

It was a good year for feminine exhibitors, with Carolyn Thomas of R1 Stewartstown topping seven other entries to win the carcass contest, taking first place both in the on-foot judging, as well as re-scoring on the rail.

Her purebred Hampshire barrow weighed 225-pounds and dressed to a yield percentage of 53.8 percent nearly a full point higher than second-place John Strawbridge's 52.9 yield.

Placing third in carcass judging was Jim Parlett with a 50.1 percent yield over fourth place Ronald Workman, with a yield of 49.5 percent.

Judge for the carcass class was Roger Bankert of Hanover. Godfrey Brothers Meats of Loganville hosted the competition held in conjunction with the york Fair.

In the Berkshire breed show, Garland Gantt exhibited the champion boar and sow, while Russell and Arlie Cornbower, New Freedom, showed the champion barrow.

Jim Parlott, R2 Airville, won all three championships in the Chester White contest, and the Barbara Mummert family, R1 Seven Valley, swept the Landrace competition. Charles Griest of Hanover garnered a triple-win in the Poland China runoffs and Jon Strawbridge, Stewartstown made a sweep of the Yorkshires and Hampshires.

Duroc honors split three ways, with Dave Holloway, New Freedom showing the champion boar, Rodger Bankert, Hanover, champion sow, and Melissa Peters, champion barrow.

In the Spotted classes Jim Parlett had the champion boar, while the Trostle family of Red Lion claimed the sow and barrow rosettes.—JB

Block says grain discussions set

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The United States will enter into grain consultations with the Soviet Union Oct. 28-29 in Vienna, Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block has announced.

"The United States will be entering regular, semi-annual consultations under the provisions of our current grain agreement with the Soviet Union," Block said.

"The agenda items for those consultations will be a review of the world crop situation, crops in the United States and crops in the Soviet Union. Secondly, we will discuss additional sales of grain to the Soviet Union, or additional needs that they may have over and above the 8 million tons already provided for by the agreement," he said.

Block said these agenda items are the same as those discussed in past consultations under the long-term grain agreement which was extended on Aug. 20 for a seventh year — through Sept. 30, 1983.

Under Secretary of Agriculture Seeley Lodwick will head the U.S. delegation and Deputy Minister of Foreign Trade Boris Gordeev will lead the Soviet group.

York Fair names FFA dairy champs

YORK — Perennial fitting-showmanship dairy winner Barbara Kilgore Marks, Airville, notched another win in her record when she took top honors in the exhibitor skills FFA York Fair runoffs.

Her three-year-old and senior yearling entries then captured the grand and reserve grand rosettes in the Holstein type show, with Reserve Senior honors going to Steve Glatfelter's two year old, and Jon Hash winning the Reserve Junior placings with his senior calf.

Scott Cooper of Delta won Grand and Reserve placings with his Ayrshire entries. Greg Fantom, also of Delta, took the Brown Swiss division over Reserve Senior and Grand Jim Haller.

Guernsey honors were claimed by brother and sister Brian and Debbie Lehman, with Brian's three year old named Grand Champion over Debbie's Reserve Senior and Grand in the same age class. Junior Champion honors as well went to Brian Lehman.

Judges for FFA dairy events were John Morris of Frederick, Maryland, and Chester County Guernsey breeder Don Brown.—JB

Youth exhibits dominate Reading Holstein show

By Laurel Schaeffer

READING — Despite the dampening rain, spirit ran high as Judge Donald Brown, Oxford, placed the entries of the 1982 Reading Fair Holstein Show. Held last Wednesday, this show proved to be the youth's as two ten-year-old boys captured Junior and Reserve Junior champion honors and two teenagers took the honors of the Senior and Grand Champion titles.

It was sixteen-year-old Cathleen Ohlinger that took home Grand Champion honors with her six-year-old Elevation daughter, Creek Bluff Elevation Mae, classified Excellent 2E.

Cathleen is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Ohlinger, Mohrsville and is attending eleventh grade at Schuylkill Valley High School. Cathleen has ten Holsteins of her own, and has been showing dairy cattle since she was nine years old. Her family, owners of Ru-Hel Farm, is currently milking 45 cows, all registered.

Taking Reserve Grand Champion honors was a four-year-old Holstein shown by seventeen-year-old Jay Bicksler, Richland. Sired by Ivanhoe Chief, and named Russelldale B Chief Pepsi, Jay has shown this cow to several other reserve champion honors and also led her to the Grand Champion title of the 4-H District Show held last month at Kutztown.

Jay is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Bicksler, Richland and a twelfth grade student at Tulpehocken High School. Having shown in 4-H for nine years, Jay also was named Champion Showman during the showmanship and fitting contest held prior to the Holstein Show.

This young man has seven cows of his own and plans to continue farming with his father after graduation. The Bicksiers milk 45 cows and are farming 260 acres. Jay is also serving as vice-president of his high school FFA chapter.

Junior Champion of the show was a senior yearling heifer, Sonja Farms Milestone Jewel owned by Kirk Sattazahn, Womelsdorf. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sattazahn, this has been the best showing for Kirk in his three years of 4-H.

Kirk is attending sixth grade in the Conrad Weiser School District and will turn eleven in October. This young dairyman is also counting the days to October when his first calf will be born from one of his other two Holsteins. The Sattazahns are presently milking about 100 cows.

Keith Schlegel, R2 Fleetwood took home the honors of Reserve Junior Champion with his junior heifer calf, Keystone Jaycee Pansy. Keith, 10, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Schlegel, Fleetwood. Showing for his second year, Keith also placed first in his class for showmanship in an earlier contest. He attends fourth grade in the Fleetwood Area School District.

Following are the show results.

NACAA honors Md. Extension agents

COLLEGE PARK, MD — Six Maryland residents received recognition during the 67th annual meeting of the National Association of County Agricultural Agents, held Sept. 12-16 in Billings, Mont.

Two of the Maryland honorees were from Carroll County — Walter C. Bay of Uniontown and Robert L. Jones of Westminster.

Others were Russell J. Balge of Cedarcroft; Betsy Gallagher of Wye Mills; Martin R. Jones of La Plata, and Kenneth E. Shifflet of Frederick.

All six are agricultural agents for the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service, headquartered at College Park.

Balge and Jones were among 22 outstanding county Extension agents from throughout the United States selected to present "Search for Excellence" papers on successful projects.

Balge gave a slide presentation on educational programs for urban audiences. A Wisconsin native, he has been an Extension horticulture and urban agriculture agent at Cockeysville since 1973, helping to serve the educational needs of home gardeners and commercial nurserymen both in Baltimore county and city.

Carroll county's Bob Jones made his "Search for Excellenct" presentation on administrative management for local offices of the Extension Service.

A native of Harford County, Jones has been the Carroll County Extension director since 1964. He came to the county in 1957 after a two-year stint as assistant county agent in Dorchester County, on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

Bay and Shifflet were both northeast regional winners in the NACAA public information awards program, along with Balge. Bay won in the radio tape class, and Shifflet was the regional class winner for a colored slide series. Balge won in the newsletter category.

At the NACAA public information awards breadfast on Sept. 14, Bay was named third in his class in national competition, and Shifflet garnered second-place national honors in the colored slide category.

Bay has been employed since 1965 as an Extension agricultural agent in Carroll County, based at Westminster. Prior to that, he spend five years as a store manager for Southern States Cooperative, Inc.

Shifflet has been an Extension agricultural agent in western Maryland since 1956. He served for 12 years in Frederick County. In 1978, he transferred to the Washington County Extension office at Hagerstown, where he still serves.

Born at Charlottesville, VA., Shifflet grew up on a dairy farm near Hershey, Pa. He holds a B.S. degree from Penn State and an M.S. degree from the University of Maryland.

Betsy Gallagher is this year's Maryland winner of the NACAA achievement award for Extension workers with less than 10 years of service. She has served since 1977 as an Extension agricultural agent at Cambridge, helping to fill the educational needs of commercial fruit and vegetable growers in Dorchester County, on Maryland's Eastern Shore. She also provides educational programs in home horticulture for county residents.

An Eastern Shore native, Gallagher holds a B.S. degree in horticulture from the University of Maryland at College Park.

In her current educational programs, Gallagher provides information to more than 150 commercial vegetable growers and 20 fruit growers in Dorchester County. She does this through direct contacts, newsletters, weekly radio programs and newspaper columns, as well as through planned educational meetings.

She has served several times as publicity chairman for the annual educational meetings of the Peninsula Horticultural Society and the Delmarva corn and soybean technology conferences.

Martin Jones is this year's Maryland winner of the NACAA Distinguished Service Award. Extension agents become eligible for the award upon completion of 10 years of service.

The DSA is presented to Extension workers who have provided outstanding practical educational programs in local communities. It is the highest honor bestowed on members by the NACAA.

A native of Anne Arundel County, Jones started as an assistant agricultural agent for Charles County upon his graduation from the University of Maryland in 1957. Headquartered at White Plains, he has been county Extension director since 1965.

In a rapidly urbanizing area, Jones has played a key role in helping the agricultural economy to remain strong and viable through Extension-sponsored educational programs.

Demonstrations, tours and educational meetings have been used to bring the latest information to producers on crop production and marketing. Some of these same methods have been used to inform the general public about agricultural and land use issues.

In recent years, some of Jones' specific accomplishments have included initiation of area weed tours of established tobacco, corn and soybean herbicide plots. An he has conducted soybean variety evaluation tests.

Jones has represented the Cooperative Extension Service on the Maryland Tobacco Improvement Foundation. He has developed educational programs on Maryland tobacco for use in the five-county tobacco-production area of southern Maryland.

Finally, he has conducted educational programs on farm income tax, management and estate planning, and economic outlook. And he has developed an agricultural orientation program for school teachers in Charles County.

First All-Pa. Feeder Pig Show, Sale a success

By Donna McConaughey

LEBANON — The first All American Feeder Pig Show and Sale, held Sept. 25 at Lebanon Fairgrounds, was termed "a success" by manager Harry Bachman of Annville.

Judge Dennis Grumbine of Myerstown, selected a heavyweight pen shown by Leon Arnold of Lebanon as the champion pen. The six York-Duroc crossbred pigs, sired by Hustle, sold for an average price of $113 each.

The Reserve Champion Pen, shown by Smith's Hog Farm of Washington, were purebred Chester Whites sired by SHF President. Mark Rohrbach of Shoemakersville purchased all six pigs, averaging 42 pounds, for $130 each.

However, the sale-topper was a pair of Duroc-Spot crossbred pigs from the third-place heavyweight pen shown by Ken Ketterer of Newville. Eric Harnish of Campbelltown purchased the pair for $175 each.

When the final calculations were in, seventy-one head averaged $93.27 with twenty-six head selling for $100 or more.

FFA and 4-H members had a chance to try out their judging skills during a contest which preceded the sale. Winners were issued buying credits to be used in purchasing project animals during the sale. Winner of the 8-14 year category was Eric Harnish, and the senior division was topped by Kenianne Rarick.

The Pennsylvania Yorkshire Association provided all show premiums and helped with other show expenses.

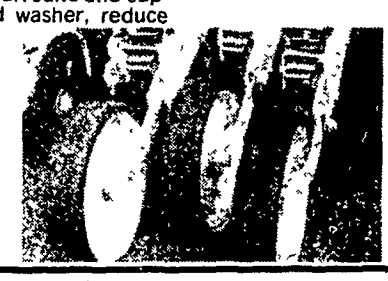
The secret is in the Seed Cup and the Depth Control Wheels

1. Fluted roll, molded of oxide-coated sintered metal, is tops for precision, smoothness and resistance to corrosion. It's well-supported at both ends, and precisely aligned for accuracy. It turns extra easy, and won't freeze up during idle periods.
2. Shut-off block of sintered metal, is also precision-molded for accuracy.
3. Fluted washer fits over the roll and mates closely with it. It's cadmiumplated to prevent corrosion, keep it like new for years.
4. Insert acts as a positive bearing surface to surround and support the fluted washer, reduce wear.



Depth Control and press wheels aid in faster seed germination.

VICON WENT TO ALL LENGTHS TO MAKE A SEEDER-SPREADER THAT GOES TO ALL WIDTHS.

Visit your Vicon dealer to see the full line of new dimension Vicon Seeder-Spreaders. They're the most accurate on the market for applying seed, all types of fertilizers, trace elements, and most farm chemicals. Hopper capacities range from 400 to 2400 pounds. Best of all is the new ADJUSTABLE FEATURE that lets you spread in widths from 20 to 45 feet.

Glass-fibre reinforced polyester makes the hopper strong, yet lightweight and easy to clean. Other critical parts that come in contact with fertilizer are made of nylon or stainless steel.

the new DIMENSION in spreading

Vicon's proven oscillating-action spout provides even, accurate coverage on flat, sloping or uneven ground. Use it for everything from broadcasting to band-spreading. The hopper can be lowered to the ground to fill easily by hand or machine.

You need a multipurpose, multiwidth seeder-spreader like this. Vicon went to all lengths to make it durable, versatile, reliable and accurate.

SILOS & UNLOADERS

Today, one out of every four silos in America is a Madison! That's because a lot of our new structures are erected on farms that already have at least one Madison. These customers know that a Madison is built to last. They also know that if there is a new idea that's better, chances are Madison will have it first.

New Madison customers quickly learn that Madison dealers do more than talk about service. For 65 years, our service people have been building a reputation for good service that can't be beat.

When you're ready to add upright storage on your farm, we invite you to compare. Look at all of the structures available. All we ask is that you include us in your comparisons. We'll take it from there.

GUNITE Silo Relining & Repairs

Extensive tests have been conducted on Gunite. Below are some of the properties of Gunite:

1. Excellent bonding
2. High Density
3. Extreme strength and hardness
4. High resistance to absorption

The excellent physical properties of the material are due to the water content being only the amount needed to satisfy chemical hydration.

Reseal and restrengthen your silo with Gunite.

Landis Holsteins nab Lampeter Fair championships

BY SALLY BAIR
Staff Correspondent

LAMPETER — A father and son team captured all the top Holstein honors at the Lampeter Fair's annual dairy show last Thursday. Greg Landis showed the Grand Champion Holstein and his father Jay showed the Reserve Grand Champion. The Landises farm together at 166 Short Lane, Lancaster.

This is the third Lancaster County fair in two weeks to be dominated by a father-son team: at last week's Solanco Fair Paul Welk and his son Mark were both in the winner's circle; and at Elizabethtown Fair, Bob and Steve Kauffman nabbed both top honors.

Greg's four-year-old Elevation daughter, Pataja Elevation Lanell also was named Best Udder in show by Judge Donald Trimble. Lanell is projected to make 20,000 pounds in her next lactation.

Jay's Pataja Milestone Beaux, a Poverty Hollow Milestone daughter, was named second best udder in the show and is projected to have a 17,000 to 18,000 pound record.

It was the first time either of the homebred animals were shown. Jay and Greg milk about 39 head in their operation.

Both animals were teamed with others from the herd to take first place Dairy Herd and first place Best Three Females. These two groups were exhibited by Greg. Jay also had first place Senior Get of Sire.

Junior Champion Holstein belonged to Steve Hershey, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Nevin Hershey. Reserve Junior Champion belonged to Sheila Frey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mowery Frey. Both were 4-H animals.

The fitting and showmanship contests became family affairs. Gerald Garber, 19, was chosen as senior fitting champion and senior showmanship champion, while his sister Janice, 12, was named junior fitting champion.

Garber said he won the fitting contest in 1981 and the showmanship contest in 1980, but winning them both was new.

Tom Barley, 11, walked off with junior showmanship honors in his third year at the halter. He also was named champion junior showman at 4-H Round-up earlier in the summer. Tom came in second in the junior fitting contest. His older brother Robert was second in the senior fitting contest and was third in the senior showmanship contest. Peter Witmer, Willow Street, was judge for that part of the show.

The Garbers also dominated the Guernsey show. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Garber, Willow Street, Gerald and Janice brought the only Guernseys to the show. Gerald noted that in previous years there was usually some competition for them.

Gerald showed the Grand Champion and the Junior Champion, which was named Reserve Grand Champion. Willows Noble Pearly, a three year old, also was named Best Udder of the show.

Janice showed the Reserve Junior Champion, a senior yearling, and observed that her brother also beat her at 4-H round-up in August.

Colleen Spahr showed her FFA animal to the Grand championship in the Ayrshire breed. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Spahr, Willow Street, Colleen's champion was Reserve Junior Champion last year. Colleen also showed the second-place junior calf.

Anita Brommer, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Brommer, Conestoga, showed the Reserve Junior Champion and the Reserve Grand Champion, a junior calf.

Krista Long, Willow Street, showed the first place senior yearling, also an FFA animal. Max Brommer, Conestoga, was first in the intermediate calf class with his 4-H animal.

Eleven-year-old Matthew Bushong, Columbia, showed the Grand Champion Jersey, a four year old named "Angie" which came from Missouri. Angie is one of just two Jerseys on the Bushong farm which has a herd of Holsteins. This is the first time for the animal and for Matthew to be named Grand Champion, and Matthew said he was "happy."

Jere Shertzer, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shertzer, New Danville,

Md. ABC plans open house

FREDERICK, MD — The Maryland Artificial Breeding Cooperative, Inc. will hold its Open House and Annual Meeting on Thursday, Oct. 14, 1982 at stud facilities near Frederick, Md.

Program highlights will include a parade of some outstanding Sire Power daughters and prominent dairy industry speakers. Also, the 19th Annual Meeting of the Maryland Dairy Shrine is scheduled with presentations and awards.

The visiting speaker will be Jack H. Britt, Professor of Animal Science at North Carolina State University. He is the author of a monthly Artificial Breeding Column in Hoard's Dairyman. Britt is also author of more than 200 scientific and technical publications dealing with reproduction in livestock.

Britt, reared on a dairy farm in Kentucky, also received his B.S. Degree from Western Kentucky University. He received his M.S. Degree and Ph. D. from North Carolina State University, where he has been the Professor of Animal Science since 1977. Prior to this, from 1970 to 1977 he served as a faculty member in the Department of Dairy Science at Michigan State University.

Britt's main area of interest and specialization is in reproductive physiology and management of dairy cattle and swine. He will speak on the topic of "From Calving to Conception."

The day's program will get underway at 10 a.m. with General Manager DuWayne Kutz reviewing the co-op's annual business for the year ending June 30, 1982.

Hay winners use Aroma-Pep

WILLIAMSPORT — Even though the 1982 summer weather has been somewhat less than perfect for making hay, two Lycoming County farmers, with the help of the hay preservative Aroma-Pep, recently won blue ribbons for hay entered in Penn State's 1982 Ag Progress Days Hay Show.

Chris and Mark Metzger, Linden Hills Farm, R2 Linden, and Lester and Jan Paulhamus, Cogan Station, won blue ribbons in hay classes for hay partially field-cured plus hay preservative. Linden Hills Farm's blue ribbon was awarded for mixed hay that had more than 50 percent legumes, while Paulhamus' hay was awarded a blue ribbon for first-cutting alfalfa.

To trim the amount of time the cut hay stayed in the field, Metzger and Paulhamus both used Aroma-Pep Forage Conditioner. Aroma-Pep, a product of D & R Sales and Mfg. Corp., Division of BOMA Enterprises, Inc., Williamsport, Pennsylvania, was developed and patented by Dorsey S. Dunlap and is currently being marketed and distributed in the eastern United States.

In addition to its use on hay, Aroma-Pep can also be used as a silage and haylage conditioner as well as a feed flavorizer for grain feeds. The use of Aroma-Pep allows hay to be baled and stored at a higher moisture content than would be possible without a preservative. As a silage treatment, Aroma-Pep keeps the silage from excessive heating which can severely reduce the fermentation process and allow spoilage. Aroma-Pep is not unique in its preservative and conditioning properties; however, it does contain an added feature — special oils flavorize forage and feed and make it more appetizing to cattle.

LEBANON — "$600 once, twice, sold. Sold for $600."

There's nothing too much out of the ordinary with such a statement by the auctioneer at a dairy cattle sale.

But the sale starts to take a bit of an unusual turn when the same animal immediately comes up for resale and the auctioneer says:

"$625 once, twice, sold again. Sold for $625."

But wait, the saga of the multiple sale of the heifer calf is not over yet.

Back in the ring for the third time, the small and somewhat bewildered black and white is put up for bids again.

And the auctioneer says:

"500 once, twice, sold. Sold for the third time at $500."

But the big-eyed calf, who's starting to develop a complex about not being wanted, still hasn't found a home.

For the fourth time, the auctioneer calls for bids and finally says:

"$450 once, twice, sold. Sold, finally, for $450."

And, the little calf – heretofore an unknown grade Holstein – takes on the sudden fame and notoriety of being sold four times at the Atlantic Northeast District Brethren Churches' annual heifer relief sale Friday, Sept. 24, at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

The multiple sale of the calf was some good-natured by-play between four friends and neighbors from Lebanon County, which went for a good cause in getting the heifer sale off to a rousing and profitable start to raise funds for Brethren relief charities.

The four-time sale of the calf started with its donation from the herd of Wenger Farms, Myerstown. It was one of 42 head of registered and grade animals gathered for the sale.

Another unusual turn concerning the sale was the selling of the calf by Glenn Wenger, his first livestock auctioneering task since recently graduating from auctioneering school. And he should have known the animal since it came out of the family herd.

The first purchaser was Carl Wenger, who bought back his own calf for $600. He signaled it to stay in the ring.

The next purchaser was dairy farmer Victor Zeigler, of R2 Myerstown. He paid an additional $625 and signaled for it to remain in the ring.

The third purchaser was Carlos Leffler, Richland oil distributor. He invested another $500 and signaled for the animal to stay in the ring.

Finally, the seven-month-old calf was bought for keeps by John Moyer, R2 Newmanstown. He paid $450.

Thus, this one calf in a few minutes time enriched the coffers of the relief sale by a total of $2175 and almost topped the sale.

In all, the sale totaled $46,542 for the 42 animals, which were gathered by Brethren churches in the Lebanon, Lancaster, York and Greater Harrisburg areas.

Combined with proceeds from an earlier sale of quilts and crafts, plus donations, the Brethren benefit effort totals a record $91,945.

The heifer calf wasn't the only animal sold more than once, although it was resold the most times during the auction. Some five animals were resold eight times as benefactors kept returning them to the ring.

As an example, Leffler actually paid $3,325 for four animals, but ended up not owning any of them.

Top animals at the sale brought $2400 and $2300 respectively. They came out of the herds of Robert Kauffman and Shellenberger Brothers.

This marked the first time that a heifer sale has been part of the annual Brethren relief fund-raising effort. The quilt and craft sale has been held for several years and the heifer sale will now become an annual part of it.

The money is used by the church to aid disaster victims both in this country and abroad.—DA

Whether you're DAIRY or BEEF AG-BAG will store More For Less. The AG-BAG System. Air-tight storage with more versatility than any other system. Just look at these AG-BAG ADVANTAGES:

1. UNLIMITED oxygen-limiting storage
2. Storage for ALL forages & grain
3. Transportable
4. Easy to use and little maintenance
5. NO dangerous silo gases
6. Silo fires WON'T occur
7. Higher moisture forage
8. NO unloader to break down
9. Extra income and potential from custom bagging
10. THE Forage System for the 80's

JUST LISTEN TO WHAT THESE AG-BAG BELIEVERS HAVE TO SAY:

Kenneth Popham of Floresville, Texas

Kenneth runs a 465 cow Dairy and said this about AG-BAG: "At today's interest rates you can't afford any other type of storage... Even with the yearly cost of bags it's still inexpensive storage... a whole lot cheaper than building barns and hiring help. I put up 13 bags last year and after seeing the results, I'll put up 25 bags this year. The bags are a good thing."

Don Carter of Parkdale, Oregon

"The best move I ever made"... says Don Carter in reference to his switch to bagging silage on his dairy near Parkdale, Oregon.

"I get 18% more feed from the same acreage and the feed lasts three times as long. I used to clean my bunks after three days, now I only need to clean them after 10 days."

Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska

"In addition to everything else, it's a management tool"... says rancher, Roland Rasmussen of Blair, Nebraska.

Roland farms 350 acres west of Blair, Nebraska, and fattens about 650 cattle from 600 lbs. to finish.

"By labeling every bag as to date and kind of feed, I can mix my feeds and eliminate the guess work in making a ration. I feed alfalfa silage, corn silage and ground ear corn stored exclusively in the bags, purchasing only my minerals and vitamin supplements."

"The AG-BAG system has enabled me to increase carrying capacity per acre at a reduced cost of gain."

Bert Anderson of Sceptre, Saskatchewan

"At least 30% more feed... I can guarantee at least that"... says rancher, Bert Anderson, of Sceptre, Saskatchewan.

"I've been able to cut my grain feeding costs in half since converting to the bagging. It's just like feeding grass. I've also eliminated the need for a liquid supplement that we always fed before going to the AG-BAG System..."

Dairylea slates annual meeting

PEARL RIVER — Dairy farmers throughout the Northeast will observe the 75th anniversary of Dairylea Cooperative Inc. when the cooperative holds its annual meeting at Hotel Syracuse, Syracuse, N.Y. on Oct. 13 and 14.

More than 900 delegates, directors, member families and guests are expected to attend, according to Clyde E. Rutherford, president. Rutherford, a dairy farmer from Otego, N.Y., will preside over the meeting and will give a principal address.

J. Roger Barber, N.Y. State commissioner of Ag and Markets will be main speaker at the Co-op's annual banquet Wednesday night, Oct. 13.

Several events in the two day program will trace highlights in the organization's 75 years of dairy marketing. The Dairymen's League, predecessor to Dairylea, was conceived in 1907 in Orange County, N.Y. when dairymen were distressed about the low price of milk and needed marketing leadership.

"Dairylea became the northeast's first major dairy cooperative in response to a serious need, "Rutherford emphasized. "The need for cooperative strength is no less today than 75 years ago. The danger to dairy farm families again is great."

The Cooperative, which marketed more than $425 million worth of milk for its members in its fiscal year ending last March 31, also will hear a report from Executive Vice President-General Manager Bob Hall. The cooperative moved its headquarters to Syracuse this September citing the area's convenience to markets, plants, and members.

Dairylea, numbering some 3,5[illegible] members, has several hundred "locals" made up of member producers, which are part of 13 districts in a seven-state area. All 13 directors of Dairylea's districts, as well as the sub-district presidents, are scheduled to be on hand for the two day affair.

Northern Tier reactivates dairy co-op

MESHOPPEN — William Sturges, President of the Wellsboro, Northern Tier Farmers Union Milk Producers Cooperative, recently announced the Board of Directors of Northern Tier has decided to reactivate the cooperative.

The co-operative, formed in May of 1981, has been inactive. Sturges said that "current problems within the dairy industry have prompted Northern Tier to make this decision."

The Tioga County dairyman further stated that "at a recent meeting in Mansfield, the Board engaged Arden Tewksbury of Meshoppen, a former officer with Eastern Milk Producers, to run the affairs of Northern Tier. Tewksbury has a long history within the dairy industry working for the betterment of dairy farmers."

Sturges said "Tewksbury's long record of successfully working for dairy farmers led to the Board's decision in engaging the former Eastern president to get Northern Tier moving." Tewksbury and officials with the Pennsylvania Farmers Union have been working with the Northern Tier Board of Directors for three weeks in revamping Northern Tier's bylaws to make the cooperative more palatable for all dairymen.

Sturges stated Northern Tier is going to be strictly a bargaining cooperative, but will be in a position to help its members with marketing problems. He added the Compromise Dairy Bill passed by Congress recently has really gotten dairy farmers "stirred up." Sturges further stated that officers of Northern Tier are already in the process of setting up meetings with Washington officials to work introducing legislation next year which would take a more realistic approach to dairy problems.

Tewksbury stated the Compromise Dairy Bill will remove about $55 million per month from the milk checks of dairy farmers in the United States. By April 1, the current legislation allows this dollar figure to accelerate to approximately $115 million per month.

Sturges and Tewksbury both agree that this type of takeout will have a crippling effect on area dairy farmers' purchasing power. They further agree that many farmer associated businesses will also suffer as a result of the Compromise Dairy Bill.

Sturges concluded by saying that "dairy farmers need additional bargaining power; and we intend to play a major role in trying to achieve this".

Northern Tier will be starting their membership drives during the month of October.

Juniors exhibit colored breeds to Pa. championships

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

HARRISBURG — Champion 4-H Milking Shorthorn honors at the state junior dairy show last Monday went to Christine Young, of Newville, with her senior two year old, Three Springs PJ Bell. The Cumberland Countian's winner also was named Best Animal Bred and Owned by colored dairy breed judge John Morris of Frederick, Maryland.

Reserve senior and grand rosettes went to Junia Laughery's three year old by Minn Duke Darius, and bred by Timothy Laugherty, R3 Union City.

Milking shorthorn junior honors went home with the intermediate calf exhibited by John Linstrom of Breinigsville, Lehigh County, while Reserve Junior winner was the junior yearling exhibited by Raymond Buffington, Spring Glen in Dauphin County.

Ayrshires were the next to parade around the Farm Show building's big arena, with William Henley's FFA project four year old claiming the contest's top spot.

Henley's Tower View Star Cadrin is a project animal for his vo-ag work at Octorara FFA in Chester County. She was bred by Sharon Nolan of Cochranville.

Taking the Reserve Senior and Grand Ayrshire spot was Kennard Henley III from Cochranville. Also an FFA project animal, the aged cow was bred by the Octorora vo-age student, and won the best bred and owned nod from judge Morris.

A third FFA entry earned junior Ayrshire ribbons for Georgia Barker, Ulysses, of Potter County's Headwaters FFA chapter. Her senior calf topped the Reserve Junior Champion, the first-place senior yearling, a 4-H entry of Deborah Shetterly, Millersburg, Dauphin County.

Christine Young, Newville, showed her senior two year old Milking Shorthorn, Three Springs PJ Bill, to both Senior and Grand Champion honors at Monday's Junior show.

The championship parade for 4-H Brown Swiss brought top state youth honors to Kathleen Kopistecki and Dainty her show-topping aged cow.

Brent and Billy Snider, New Enterprise, Bedford County, kept the Grand and Reserve ribbons in the family, splitting the two top honors in the Guernsey breed division.

The champion purple went to brother Brent with his home-bred aged cow by Sniders Arcos Butch. She's scored Excellent with lactation records to 16,000 pounds. Billy's four year old by Houseleys Dari Fayvor, in the reserve slot, is scored VG-86. The winning 4-H'ers are the sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Snider.

Guernsey Junior and Reserve placings went to the top pair of senior yearlings.

Elaine Hill, Sandy Lake in Mercer County, the junior champion winner edged out reserve placer Douglas Layman, of Waynesboro, Franklin County.

Walking to the head of the Brown Swiss competition was Kathleen Kopistecki of Royersford, Montgomery County. Her 4-H project aged cow by White Cloud Doreen's Delegate was bred by David Noland of Newtown Square.

In the Reserve Senior and Grand Brown Swiss place was Gary Lee Mase of Lebanon. His three year old by Sugar Valley Marauder was selected best bred and owned for the Little Dutchmen FFA'er.

Ann Daubert, Pine Grove, Schuylkill County, took the Brown Swiss junior championship with her senior calf, over the Reserve winner, the first-place junior yearling heifer exhibited and bred by Mike Welsh of East Berlin, York County.

The Brown Swiss entries showed prior to the Holstein competition, and were the sold colored breed animals judged by Bertram Stewart of Onatrio, Canada.

Largest colored breed contest was the Jersey classes, with about 130 entries.

Highlighting that runoff was the selection of Lisa Lusk's aged cow for Champion, Best Bred and owned, and Best Uddered. The Excellent five year old is by BS Noble Superb. Lisa is from Charleroi in Washington County.

Pulling into the reserve spot was E. Robert Waltemyer, Collegeville, Montgomery County. His home-bred Walebe Prospector Donna topped her 4 Year Old class.

Jersey Junior honors went to Kathy Reich's own-bred senior yearling by Golden Faithful, a project heifer for her vo-ag studies at Selinsgrove FFA. Kathy resides at Winfield in Snyder County.

Stephanie Kocher of Mansfield, Tioga County, had her junior calf chosen Reserve Heifer Champion. She's a member of the Mansfield FFA.

Sheep conference focuses on genetics

UNIVERSITY PARK — "This year's Pennsylvania Sheep Production conference has been structured to provide some working knowledge to those interested in optimizing their productivity of lamb and wool," said Clair Engle, State Extension sheep specialist at Penn State.

The Sheep Breeding and Production Conference will be Nov. 12 and 13 at the J.O. Keller Conference Center at University Park. Joe Whiteman, professor of Sheep Breeding and Selection at Oklahoma State University will speak on the practical application of genetics, selection and breeding of sheep for optimum lamb and wool production.

Demonstrations will be conducted on grading market lambs and carcass evaluation. Merchandising lamb and wool directly to the consumer will also be discussed.

Pre-registration information can be requested by writing: Conference and Short Course Office, 306 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA. 16802 or calling 814/865-8301.

MILK MARKET NEWS

Federal Order 4
Base milk climbs four pennies

Middle Atlantic Order Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine recently announced an August 1982 base milk price of $13.72 per hundred-weight and an excess milk price of $12.42. The weighted average August price was $13.75 and the butterfat differential for the month was 17.0 cents.

The base milk price increased four cents from July but was 13 cents below last August. The weighted average price was also up four cents from July. The advertising withholding rate, which is deducted from the base and excess milk prices but not the weighted average price, was 14 cents a hundredweight in August 1982 compared with 13 cents last year.

A total of $707.5 thousand was withheld for advertising in August. The gross value of producer milk during August was $69.3 million, compared with $68.4 million a year earlier.

Shine said that producer milk recipts totaled 505.3 million pounds during August, an increase of 10.4 million pounds or over two percent from last year. A total of 7,169 producers were shipping to Order 4 handlers in August, a drop of 254 from a year ago. The average daily delivery per producer was 2,274 pounds during the month, an increase of 123 pounds or 5.7 percent from last August.

Class I producer milk totaled 222.5 million pounds and was up over two million pounds from a year ago. Class I utilization was 44.03 percent in August, only slightly below the 44.51 Class I percentage a year ago.

Base milk accounted for 91.57 percent of total producedr milk receipts. The average butterfat testof producer milk during August was 3.47 percent compared with 3.50 percent in July and 3.49 percent last August.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales at 186.6 million pounds during August, a decline of 3.1 million pounds or 1.7 percent from a year ago, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

October Class I set at $15.22

Shine also announced a Class I milk price of $15.22 per hundredweight for October 1982. This price is up two cents from the September price and is three cents below the October 1981 Class I price.

Class II milk price listed at $12.56 per hundredweight for August 1982 while the butterfat differential remained at 17.0 cents for the month. The Class II milk price is up nine cents from July.

These class prices are based on the August 1982 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.44 per hundredweight at a 3.5 percent butterfat content.

The USDA reported that the wholesale price of Grade A butter at Chicago for August was $1.4807 per pound and the nonfat dry milk price was $.9346 per pound, f.o.b. plants in the Chicago area.

Assessment dropped

The 2½ cent per hundredweight administrative assessment will be waived on milk handled during the months of September, October and November 1982, Shine reported.

The assessment will be reinstated effective with December 1982 milk deliveries.

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Farm swapping

In the early days of American agriculture., a farmer who felt hemmed in by too many neighbors could just load up and move west. There was always plenty of land—available for the taking.

That option has long since disappeared, but there is still a faily painless way to escape urban pressures. Simply trade farms. If handled properly, a trade can be done tax-free.

I remember visiting a fairly large farm near Chestertown, Md. a few years ago where a new swine operation had been set up. I was told that the owner had traded one small farm in the Baltimore-Washington megalopolis for three farms in the land of "pleasant living."

It sounded like an excellent trade to this country boy who grew up in a community where trading horses was common. I once traded 20 bushels of oats for a good old horse and didn't have any tax problems, but what about trading something as large as a farm?

It's perfectly legal in the eyes of the Internal Revenue Service. A farmer can swap one farm for another without the tax burden that goes along with selling a farm.

The tax laws say that property held for productive use in a business or for investment may be exchanged for property of "like kind" which is also to be used the same way. As long as the trade involves property of like-kind, the tax burden is minimal.

Using those rules, the Delmarva farmer mentioned above was able to trade a small farm in the midst of suburbia — one that was valuable to a developer — for a much larger spread in a more desirable agricultural area.

How was this accomplished? I don't really know the fine details, but in general it went like this: The farmer was approached by a developer who wanted to buy the place. Knowing the tax pitfalls involved in out-right selling, the farmer suggested a trade — for land of equal value in an area where he wouldn't mind moving. It then became the buyer's problem to assemble the farms acceptable to the farmer. These were purchased by the investor and traded even up for the one farm in suburbia.

The exchange met the test of like-kind, so the farmer had no big tax problem. He also avoided the problem of selling a farm and then trying to find another one in the short period allowed by the capital gains laws. He let the buyer do the work. After all, it was the developer who wanted the suburban farm, so it was only fair that he arrange the swap.

There are many variations on this farm swap idea with many opportunities for Delmarva farmers to get much larger acreages farther west. Swapping isn't limited to land. The law just says property — that includes machinery, livestock, fence posts, and many other things. It must be business connected, however. It might be tough to explain the swap of a saddle horse for a snowmobile.

The like-kind definition is pretty broad and covers a lot of possibilities. There seems to be no problem trading a hog farm for cropland or a vegetable farm for a beef farm.

Maybe a farm swap offers a retiring farmer a way to divide holdings. First, trade for as many parcels as needed, then in an orderly fashion transfer these as complete units to the apparent heirs. That might be much more palatable than selling the home place and dividing the money.

Here's a case where good legal advice is needed. And no doubt where farmers need a lot more specific information. Tax accountants, realtors, bankers — perhaps some other folks should be visited before a farm swap deal gets too far along.

There are some pitfalls and some strong advantages. But with growing urban pressure, more farmers may be considering the possibility of farming farther west. A farm swap might be a great way to do that. Or perhaps a dairy producer who wants to retire could swap a small dairy farm for a larger crops farm that could then be tended part-time or easily rented out.

Farm swapping isn't a common occurance, but it is happening and it could be used to farmers' advantages if they get good information before they get involved.

York tags 4-H dairy champs

BY JOYCE BUPP
Staff Correspondent

YORK — Dairy judging got underway at the York Fair with the 4-H classes leading off in the first round of two days of cattle exhibiting. Colored breeds paraded before official John Morris of Maryland, while Chester County Guernsey breeder Don Brown placed the Holstein classes.

(Turn to Page D16)

All the York Fair Jersey 4-H breed honors went to Sue Eisenhart, with her Junior and Grand Champion intermediate heifer. Dairy princess Nancy Eisenhart had the pleasure of awarding the rosettes to her younger sister.

Two familiar faces in York Guernsey competition headed the winners line during 4-H dairy judging at the York Fair. Todd Rutter, left, was Senior and Grand Champion over his brother Chad, the Reserve Senior and Grand exhibitor. Awarding ribbons was York Dairy Princess Nancy Eisenhart.

Selective herbicide

The mulch you use on strawberries this fall has weed seeds and volunteer grain. Left unchecked, they'll germinate to cause problems next spring. Once these seeds sprout they cannot be controlled by residual herbicides. But Devrinol herbicide, applied now—before you mulch—will stop weed germination in the spring. Use Devrinol preceding rain or snow and prior to ground freeze, then apply mulch. You won't have to worry about weeding, or weed competition, all the way to picking time.

Potter, Elk antlerless changes

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Game Commission will supervise public drawings for anterless deer licenses in both Potter and Elk counties this fall.

Potter County treasurer Richard McCaigue and Elk County treasurer John R. Kestler have both been recalled as agents. Consequently, persons requesting anterless licenses in those counties must modify their official yellow application envelopes to reflect a change of address, and must make checks or money orders payable to the Pennsylvania Game Commission rather than the county treasurer.

Potter County applications must be mailed to: Pennsylvania Game Commission, P.O. Box 504, Coudersport, Pa. 16905. Elk County applications will be sent to: Pennsylvania Game Commission, P.O. Box 127, Ridgway, Pa. 15853.

Applications will be received by first class mail beginning Monday, Oct. 4. Those received Monday and Tuesday, and until the time of the drawings Wednesday at 1 p.m., will be eligible. The drawings, under Game Commission supervision, will be in the county courthouses.

York dairy

Scott Cooper's winning four-year-old Ayrshire claimed another Grand championship at the York Fair 4-H show, over Julie Lehman's Reserve Grand entry.

Todd's four year old won the Senior and Grand honors over Chad's junior two year old, while Chad also earned the Junior Champion rosette with his senior calf. Reserve Junior Champion honors went to Darryl Rohrbaugh.

Other exhibitors included: Jr. calf: Matt Kessler, first; Peggy Klinedinst, second; Bernie Lehman, third and Angela Cooper, fourth. Lori Kessler, intermediate; Chad Rutter and Chris Staner, senior calf. Junior yearling entries were Todd Rutter, first; Jenelle Boyer, second; Chris Staner, thrid, Debbie Lehman, fourth, and Paul Rauhauser, fifth. Darryl Rohrbaugh was first over Barry Lehman in the second place, in senior yearling.

Junior two year old Chad Rutter, first; Brian Lehman, second; senior two year old, Paul Rauhauser, Deborah Lehman,

Wheat, barley trials help Del. growers choose

NEWARK, Del. — Farmers will soon be planting small grains in Delaware. Barley should be planted in October. Wheat should go in after Oct. 10 through November (the Hession fly-free date for Sussex County). The fly has not been a serious problem in the state for several years because wheat plantings have been delayed to avoid egg laying.

Growers looking for varieties to plant may get ideas by reading the field study summary of the University of Delaware's 1982 wheat and barley trails. Extension crops spcialist Frank Webb recently prepared a report evaluating the performance of 27 wheat and seven barley varieties at two locations in the state — Georgetown and Woodside.

Henry, Maury and Surry are still the primary barley varieties for Delaware, Webb says. Over a seven-year period these varieties have averaged over 70 bushels an acre. In 1982 they each averaged over 85 bushels to the acre. A promising new release, Sussex, did even better this summer at more than 92 bushels an acre, but seed from this variety probably won't be commercially available for several years. Overall, 1982 average yield across all seven varieties grown was nearly 83 bushels an acre.

In this year's wheat study, the average overall yield was 52 bushels, with individual yields ranging from 36 to 70 bushels an acre. Top performer at Georgetown was a new variety, Wheeler, which also did very well at Woodside. Other named varieties which did well at Georgetown were McNair 1003 (62 bushels), Hunter (60), and Abe (59.4). Several others yielded more than 50 bushels an acre.

"Wheat and barley varieties perform differently under different soil, fertility and climatic conditions," Webb says. He advises farmers to try new varieties on a limited scale first, to see which perform best under their growing conditions. Then increase acreage accordingly.

No-tillage yields of both wheat and barley were comparable to conventionally grown grain in this year's trials. Webb says this has been true for three years. "No-tillage grain has performed well where weed pressure has not been a problem," he says. "Most of the small grains planted after corn will need an application of paraquat to kill existing winter annuals. This is not usually necessary after soybeans."

Webb recommends a seeding rate of 1½ to 2 bushels to the acre for wheat, and 2 to 2½ bushels for barley.

Penn State reports changes in lime law

UNIVERSITY PARK — Changes in the state lime law regulatons by the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture require adjustments in limestone recommendations, says Douglas Beegle, Penn State Extension agronomist.

The major change in the law is the lowering of the minimum Calcium Carbonate Equivalent (CCE) for ag lime from 89 percent to 70 percent CCE. This means changes so the correct amount of lime needed to neutralize the acid in the soil is used.

Penn State has prepared a table to aid the farmers in determining how much lime to use. A copy of this table, the Liming Material Conversion Table, will accompany all soil test reports sent out by Penn State's Merkle Lab.

The change in the law was made in hopes of increasing availability of liming materials at a reasonable price in areas of the state where local lime does not meet the old minimum CCE.

In these areas farmers were forced to either pay high prices to have acceptable liming materials shipped in or to use unlabeled, substandard lime, in which case they had no idea of what they were getting. The new regulations permit this use of substandard lime provided the rates of application are adjusted to compensate for the lower CCE of the material.

Your future herd

Your herd of tomorrow is the calves you are raising today. How well or how poorly your future herd does depends partly on how well you take care of your calves and heifers

A calf that has been subjected to a lot of respiratory problems or one that has been stunted for whatever reason will not perform to her maximum as a cow or she may not last as long in the herd. That is a terrible waste of genetic potential bred into that heifer, and it's costly.

Just think what it costs you to feed a heifer several extra months just so she will be large enough to calve without difficulty. Think how calving problems can tear up a small, stunted heifer. Consider what you lose when cows produce 2,000 pounds less than their potential, or if they have to be culled from the herd a year or two sooner than usual—all because of problems that may have originated from how she was taken care of as a young heifer.

Keep in mind that most cows never start making a profit until their second lactation. Chances are, the income a cow makes in her first lactation doesn't even cover the cost of rearing her to freshening age. Depending on how good a cow is and what your costs are, a cow may not return any profit until her second lactation (3-4 years of age).

Each additional lactation, then, has the potential for being a profit lactation. In other words, an additional lactation or two that cow remains in your herd can double or triple the profit she makes in her lifetime.

As we enter the calving season, let's remember that the attention and care given heifers is important. They are your future.

From hutches To what?

If calves could talk, many of them would thank dairy producers for using hutches. Hutches have helped farmers save the lives of many calves. As a result, fewer dairy farmers are having to rely upon purchased replacements to maintain herd size. In fact, many are able to be selective as to which heifers they bring into their herds and which cows are culled. That makes it easier to rapidly upgrade dairy herds.

However, one problem facing many dairy farmers is where to put those calves that come out of calf hutches? They've gotten the calves off to a good start in the hutches, but after they're weaned and moved out of the hutches, the trouble starts. Many calves go "down hill," and some die. Why?

There could be several contributing factors. Weaning a young calf, moving her, changing her feeding program (kinds of feeds as well as the method of feeding), putting her into a group pen where she has to compete with other heifers (some larger in size) putting her in poorly ventilated and crowded facilities, and exposing her to disease organisms of other herdmates is an extreme stress for these young calves at a time when they are least able to tolerate it.

Hopefully, these young calves acquired some immunity from their dams at birth, and through early feeding of colostrum milk. This immunity serves the calf well in the early weeks of life. This immunity begins to fade, however, unless we have a good vaccination program or unless the calf has had some exposure to older herdmates and the disease organisms they are carrying.

But, in calf hutches, calves are usually isolated from each other and from older herdmates and are less able to build up natural immunity to those problems that are prevalent in the herd. Thus, it is advisable to consult your veterinarian about an immunization program for your herd.

It also is advisable to acclimate calves gradually to herd conditions. First of all, be sure they are eating dry feed before they are weaned. Then, let the calves get over the shock of weaning before

Light Up Your Herd With Sire Power

LINEAR APPRAISAL AND MATING PROGRAM

LINEAR APPRAISAL AND MATING PROGRAM from Sire Power INC

The Linear Appraisal and Mating Program (LAMP), available through Sire Power, is a valuable herd improvement tool. It can help you plan your breeding program with the aid of professional advice. The Sire Power Analysts are up-to-date on the transmitting patterns of all Sire Power bulls and are in a position to make recommendations for their optimum use. The goal of this program is to produce profitable replacements able to stand the stress of high production over a long lifetime.

Basically, the program involves an evaluation of fourteen physical trait areas for each cow. Two performance areas, milking speed and disposition are also included. Two sires (a first, and second choice) are then recommended that offer the greatest potential for improvement of production, type and longevity. The program is custom designed to meet each dairyman's goals for his herd.

The weeks of October 18 and October 25 have been scheduled for LAMP (dairy herd analysis) in the Western PA area. Balanced breeding consultants, Steve Neely and Steve Wilson, will be in your area to analyze the individual cows in your herd.

The cost of this service is $2.00 per cow with a minimum charge of $25 per herd.

moving them to a new facility and into a group situation. Your veterinarian may want you to immunize your calves before moving them.

When calves are moved, minimize the competition and stress. Be sure they are eating the same kinds of feeds and out of the same facilities (bunks vs. buckets, water bowls vs. buckets, etc.). Initially, expose them to a small group of calves (3 or 5) of the same size and in a pen that has plenty of bunk space. Ideally, this group pen should be located away from older herd mates. This will provide calves more time to gradually develop immunity to organisms that are prevalent among older herdmates.

Many farms do not have adequate facilities to gradually acclimate young calves to herd conditions. To overcome this problem, here are several possibilities.

Super hutches

Consider the super hutch concept as an intermediate housing facility that enables calves to adjust to group housing before they are exposed to older herd mates. The super hutch also provides calves with plenty of fresh air, sunshine and excercise - similar to what the calves were used to in the hutches, and more healthier than warm, stuffy, dark, crowded pens.

The super hutch is basically a small, three-sided shed or large hutch that is big enough to house several larger calves. With some modification, the Penn State solar calf kennel could become a super hutch. Plans are available from your local Penn State Extension office.

If you don't want to build or purchase super hutches, then consider keeping calves in the hutches for a longer period of time—until they are several months old and big enough to carry the hutches away. At this older age, they'll be better able to adjust to group housing and older herd mates.

You don't have enough hutches, but you do have other heifer facilities, you say. Then, you may wish to start your fall calves indoors in your present facilities and keep them there all winter. The level of infection (the bacteria and fungus load) is usually lower in these facilities in the fall than during the latter part of winter. This assumes the pens were vacated and cleaned over the summer months, and the disease cycle had been broken. Hopefully, by the time the level of infectious organisms builds up to problem levels, the calves will have developed some immunity to them.

The hutches, then, are saved for calves born later in the winter—calves which have little to no immunity. These calves could be kept in the winter—calves could be kept in the hutches for the remainder of the winter. Another advantage of this concept is not moving calves from cold housing to warm housing, and visa versa.

One disadvantage of this last concept is calves are outside in the hutches during the coldest part of the winter. They won't mind this if the hutch is dry, draft-free and well-bedded, and if they are fed enough energy (high quality milk replacers, milk, grain, etc.) to help them maintain body heat. However, the person tending the calves will have different ideas because of unpleasant and inconvenient working conditions.

The important thing is to consider your calf housing needs now and develop a plan to get you through the winter. Consider calf housing, heifer housing, ventilation, immunization and deworming programs, nutritional needs, protection from drafts and inclement weather, acclimation measures that help reduce stresses, etc.

It'll be hard to see many immediate returns for your efforts. The big returns come several years down the road when they are doing well in your milking herd.

USDA delays dairy assessment 45 days

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Proposed regulations for implementing the 50-cents per hundredweight dairy collection plan developed by Congress will be published next week by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, according to Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block.

In fulfilling the expessed intent of Congress that the plan be imposed, USDA will begin collection on Dec. 1. Final regulations establishing the collection process will not be formalized until the close of a 45-day public comment period.

"Since the collection process required by this legislation is unprecedented, it is appropriate to give the affected parties an opportunity to comment on how the plan is imposed," Block said.

Authority for this phase of the amended dairy price support program runs from Oct. 1, 1982 until Sept. 30, 1985. Such collections must be terminated at any time USDA estimates government purchases of dairy products fall below five billion pounds milk equivalent during the marketing year.

The congressional plan also provides for an additional 50-cents per hundredweight collection, effective April 1, 1983, provided projected government purchases exceed 7.5 billion pounds milk equivalent during the marketing year.

USDA withdraws proposed beef grading changes

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is withdrawing its Dec. 30, 1981, proposal to revise the beef carcass and slaughter cattle grade standards.

"The common denominator of the more than 4,000 comments received was a strong perception that the proposed changes would reduce quality in beef leading to consumer confusion, and possibly even a lessened demand for beef," said John Ford, deputy assistant secretary of agriculture for marketing and inspection services.

"While we feel our palatability studies are sound, and that essentially the same taste can be maintained in beef with slightly reduced production coats, consumer confidence is essential to successful marketing and industry profitability," Ford said. "USDA's proposal did not have sufficient support among either the industry or the consuming public to maintain that confidence."

The concern of what impact this perception of lowered quality would have on the total beef industy was a major consideration in USDA's decision to withdraw the proposal, Ford said.

"We view our role as that of a 'moderator' assisting the industry and consuming public in maintaining a dynamic beef grading system acceptable to all users," he said. "It is further the desire and obligation of this administration to provide the type and nature of service that best reflects the identifiable and agreed upon wishes of the industry in marketing beef to a knowledgeable and satisfied consuming public. Marketing is not good marketing unless the consumer is satisfied."

USDA has consistently upheld the philosophy that beef grade standards cannot be static; they must be dynamic to be of the greatest value to all users of the system from producer to consumer, Ford said.

"As new technology has emerged and as consumers' tastes and desires have changed, USDA has kept with this philosophy by making changes in the standards as necessary to meet the changing needs of the users of the system," he said.

"USDA continues to be concerned about the profitability of the beef industry as it strives to provide the American consumer with adequate supplies of fairly priced beef at the quality level desired," Ford said. "The applicability of USDA beef grades will be closely monitored in the months ahead."

USDA is willing to work with committees or research groups representing all segments of the industry — producer to consumer — to further study the effectiveness of USDA beef grades, he said.

Beef grade standards are intended to segregate the beef supply into groups of carcasses with similar attributes of palatability and yields of cuts. Grades provide a common language for marketing livestock and meat and they are the basis on which the voluntary USDA meat grading service operates, Ford said.

Notice of this decision was published in the Sept. 22 Federal Register.

Shorthorn Assn. accepts lean beef challenge

OMAHA, Neb. — The decision of USDA not to change the beef grading standards affords the beef industry a great opportunity, comments James W. Shirley, executive secretary of the 2,500 member American Shorthorn Assn.

The challenge which lies ahead for the beef industry is to produce cattle which will quality grade Choice and still not possess excessive outside fat cover. "The members of the American Shorthorn Association view this challenge as a great opportunity for the beef industry to increase consumption and to regain credability with the consumers," Shriley says.

According to Shirley, recent tests conducted by the American Shorthorn Association confirm the genetics are available to produce cattle which will grade Choice under present standards, and yet produce a lean desirable carcass. Results of a recent study of Shorthorn-sired steers revealed that, of 93 steers fed, 97 percent graded Choice and 96 percent of the carcasses were yield grade 2 and 3.

The steers, sired by seven different Shorthorn bulls and out of black, white faced cows, were 15.5 months old when slaughtered and were on feed only 90 days. The steers were bred, calved, and backgrounded at Padlock Ranch, Dayton, Wy., fed at Ballentine Brothers Feedlot, Brule, Ne., and slaughtered at the Iowa Beef Processors Plant at West Point, Ne.

N.Y. Beef Cattlemen meet

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — A report on the success of the 1982 Empire Farm Days beef barbecue highlighted the quarterly meeting of the council of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association.

Debbie Mather of Marcellus, chairman of the three-day barbecue which was jointly sponsored by the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association and the CowBelles, reported each organization netted $4,725.80. William Cisco of Lindley, president of the New York Beef Cattlemen's Association, expressed appreciation for the success of the project.

"The beef barbecue achieved dual goals of promoting beef to the public and of raising funds for our product-promotion and producer-oriented activities. We are making plans for an even better Beef Barbecue project in 1983," he said.

Jean Shwartz of Earlville reported on a meeting she attended with representatives of several other northeastern states to hear a presentation by John Huston, president of the National Livestock and Meat Board. Huston emphasized the need for industry support from the Northeast for the Meat Board's research and promotion programs. Shwartz asked for support to come from "the grass roots level" and to be voiced to county Farm Bureau policy development committees.

Peter Darby of Earville reported on the performance testing program being readied for members. He said, "The program is a good basic one that is geared for the commercial cattleman but will help all beef producers." The council approved an appropriation of $500 to implement the program which Darby said is expected to be self-supporting.

Helen Patton of Bainbridge reporting the promotion committee which she heads will meet Oct. 8 to work on the Beef Queen project, door prizes for the annual meeting and progress of the special fund-raising project. This project is the selling of tickets for a cash prize of $200 or a head gate with each Division asked to sell 60 books of tickets.

Plans were discussed for the annual meeting Jan. 29 at the Hilton Inn on the Campus, Rochester, Arnold Schonberg of Ilion will coordinate the Trade Show.

Penn State joins in TRAP education

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U. S. Department of Agriculture is spending more than $1 million at 18 land grant universities including Penn State, to help give livestock and poultry farmers information and management techniques to use drugs and chemicals safely and avoid marketing animals with residues.

"Farmers need these drugs and chemicals as a part of their management program, but they must be able to use them without causing a residue," said George Meyerholz, a USDA veterinarian. "When slaughtered animals are found to have unacceptable residue levels, the carcasses are condemned, and the problem traced to its source."

Therefore, Meyerholz said, USDA's Extension Service will develop an educational program about TRAP — the total residue avoidance program — which was developed by USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service. The program will initially begin at land-grant universities in California, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin. Another 12 states will be added to the program later this fall.

Projects, which are aimed at educating farmers about proper use of chemicals and drugs, include developing slide sets for Cooperative Extension Service State specialists, county agents and industry representatives to use when working with farmers and farm organizations.

Several universities will develop farmer-oriented publications and educational programs on animal drugs and drug residues. The publications will encourage procedures the permit farmers to test their own animals before marketing them.

In other projects, animals will be monitored after they've been given drugs to see how long it takes for their systems to become drug free. The data from these projects and other data about animal drugs and drug residues will be developed into an Extension Service computer program that will be accessible to all state extension services and to industry.

As the projects are completed, results will become available to other state extension services and industry to use in other educational programs. The TRAP program is expected to last about three years.

Update on the poultry industry

By Herb Jordan

Penn State Extension Poultry Specialist

Side trip to rabbit hutch

People who keep rabbits will soon face a major financial decision - whether to allow the rabbit to earn net income or to keep the rabbit as a guest on the farm.

Of the 100 calls I get each year on rabbits, the primary question deals with: "Where can I market all these rabbits?", or "Why do I always have more rabbits than money?" Some say they consistently lose money on rabbits.

The second question most frequently asked is: "How do I prevent sickness, disease or parasites in rabbits;" "My rabbits are sensitive and get sick easily."

As a management specialist, I view the rabbit as an animal to be properly cared for. This means improved genetic selection, the most healthy environment, adequate nutrition, and a health program to prevent or control disease.

Capital flow in rabbits is usually out of the grower's pocket into someone else's pocket. So money in the rabbit business depends on your point of view.

Do you keep the rabbit, or does the rabbit earn net income and keep you? Reproduction, growth rate, quality of the animal, and health of the rabbit relate to marketability, price or earning power.

In the Pennsylvania rabbit industry large commercial herds of 400 to 7,000 breeding does are few; nearly all rabbit growers have 30 breeding does or fewer and usually no more than 200 rabbits total. One doe rabbit can provide adequate rabbit meat for one family of four for one year. So this means that two or more does are considered a commercial herd.

The rabbit has potential in the future but currently it has too high a variability in market demand, health and reproductivity. This makes the rabbit business local - where all problems and markets have to be solved or dealt with locally.

Some rabbitries are financially successful while many are mediocre or poor. There is no rabbit market quote commonly accepted for quantity, quality and price such as in poultry, eggs or milk. Therefore each rabbit grower is on his own to establish lab, meat, pet or pelt markets.

A five-pound bag of rabbit feed in a local pet shop sells for $1,000 per ton which is probably $200 per ton for feed and $800 per ton for love or aesthetic appreciation of the animal.

Not all rabbit growers relate to profit, net income or money — youth projects use rabbits as a model for education. The youngster learns responsibility in the care of an animal.

Market for rabbits may be as a pet. Love a rabbit as a pet or companion animal and the owner gets an inner fulfillment.

Some keep the rabbit as a hobby, show or exhibition animal. Show stock must be purchased and bred selectively to win first place in open competition among registered stock.

Meat for the table can be profitable but seldom is, because of low or erratic consumer demand, low prices and the absence of dressing plants for rabbits.

Skins for warmth and style are rarely seen as a business in Pennsylvania; however, Rex rabbits are reported to be active in Utah. Some say Rex rabbits are now quite valuable.

Capital moves out of the rabbit business in most cases. It is not a profitable business yet. There is an "X" or unknown factor in rabbits which means some earn profit from rabbits while many people lose money or break even. Investment in rabbits vary from $10 to $50 per doe for housing and equipment. This variation is too wide to predict net income of a business.

Income at auction or in the industry varies from 10 cents per pound to $4 per pound or more live which is too wide to understand.

Here is a budget of cost of producing live rabbit. This producer was not earning net income for meat markets so this total cost of production would have to be reduced:

Helms commends U.S. feed grain announcements

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Senator Jesse Helms commended Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block for his announcement of the 1983 feed grain program and additional funds for on-farm storage.

"Secretary Block's announcement of a 10 percent paid diversion and a 10 percent acreage reduction is excellent news for the American farmer," said Helms, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Congress had required that a paid diversion of at least 5 percent be implemented for 1983.

"This strong action by the secretary demonstrates his effective use of the farm program tools provided by Congress in the 1981 farm bill, which I introduced and supported. Despite difficult economic circumstances, this legislation has been effective in aiding the American farmer."

"I am also pleased with the allocation of an additional $60 million for the farm storage facility loan program. These are short-run actions which will boost the farm economy and help farm prices," Helms said.

"The public should note that these actions today will ultimately provide savings to the taxpayer through reduced government spending on surplus commodities in the future," Helms said.

"I must caution, however, that government production controls is not the long-term solution to problems in the grain sector of economy. We cannot indefinitely reduce U.S. production in the face of expanded plantings in other countries. In fact, I have been concerned that a very large paid diversion would allow other countries to expand export sales at our expense," said Helms. "However, the reports of record-breaking fall crops in the U.S. make this action necessary.

"Farmers want and need profits in the marketplace. The Reagan Administration is aggressively seeking world markets for our products, and this action will further help to balance supply with demand."

HARRISBURG — Applications for 1982 bear licenses will be received by the Pennsylvania Game Commission throughout the entire month of September. Hunters applying for licenses should familiarize themselves with the new regulations and be aware that no "group" licenses will be issued this year and only three applications may be mailed in a single envelope.

Procedures have been streamlined to expedite mailing and handling. All applications must be mailed or delivered personally to the Commission's Harrisburg headquarters in an official red combination envelope-application form suppled with each regular hunting license. Hunters are cautioned to read the instructions carefully and make certain their applications arrive in Harrisburg no later than Sept. 30.

90,000 bear licenses have been allocated and should demand exceed the allocation, a public drawing will be held. If a drawing is necessary, it'll be held Monday, Oct. 4, at 9:30 a.m. in Harrisburg. Applications received after Sept. 30 will be voided and returned to the sender.

Should the demand for licenses not exceed the allocation, the Commission will continue to receive applications and issue bear licenses on a "first come - first served" basis until the supply is exhausted.

Of the 90,000 allocated, 87,300 have been set aside for residents. Three percent, 2,700, are earmarked, by lawn, for non-residents. Residents and non-residents may not apply in the same envelope.

Wool producers approve promotion checkoff

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — Officials of the National Wool Growers Association complimented the nation's sheep producers last week following the approval of the increased level of funding for lamb and wool promotion programs.

Sheep producers recently endorsed an agreement with the U.S. Department of Agriculture through a nationwide referendum that would withhold funds from their wool payments for advertising programs.

Don Meike, a Kaycee, Wyoming, rancher who is chairman of the Board of the NWGA, commended wool growers and lamb feeders on the ratification which he termed a "wise decision."

Speaking before the Public Lands Council in Reno, Nevada, Meike said "The vote was a tough economic decision for most sheep ranchers and this certification of the increased assessment places a heavy responsibility on industry leaders to produce positive results.

"The plurality of the referendum approval, though smaller than in the past, reaffirms the sheepman's commitment to selling his own product. But I don't think they're going to be satisfied with the business-as-usual approach to these programs. We must do a better job of merchandising and consumer education with these funds."

Marvin Cronberg, president of the Salt Lake City based NWGA, pointed out his organization and its federated state members put a great deal of effort into informing members and other sheep producers on the various programs carried out by the American Shee. Producers Council prior to the vote in August. The Council, located in Denver, Colorado, is a recipient of the funds approved through the referendum, and is responsible for industry-wide product promotional efforts.

Cronberg said that the extensive information effort by NWGA surfaced some concerns and suggestions which shouldn't be ignored when the producers' funds are being allocated for various programs.

The final results showed that 72 percent of the sheep owners, representing 76 percent of the sheep, voted for increased levels of funding for the ASPC.

Legumes best for heifers

COLUMBIA, Mo. — You can't beat good legumes for getting payback on dairy heifers, according to University of Missouri-Columbia dairy scientists.

"We have consistently found that heifers cannot eat as much grass as legumes. So they do better on legumes even if farmers feed them a lot of grain with their grass," said Ron Belyea.

"Furthermore, heifers on grass forage need more energy and protein supplementation than those fed legumes. That makes legume feeding more economical.

"In any case, getting heifers to grow out fast and calve early means quicker payback on farmers' investment in them.

"Reducing calving age from 30-32 months to 26-28 may cost $25 to $50 more in feed. But getting milk in a tank two to three months earlier means a heifer is establishing her genetic potential and starting to pay her way sooner."

Stan Bell, research specialist at UMC's Southwest Center near Mt. Vernon, Mo., noted that an 80-pound Holstein calf needs to gain 1.7 pounds per day in order to weigh 700 pounds in one year. From one year to two years, Holstein heifers should gain 1.4 pounds per day to be at 1,200 pounds at calving.

Bell and Belyea offered these additional management tips:

- Balance heifer rations for protein, calcium, phosphorus, salt and vitamins;
- Provide calcium, phosphorus and trace mineral salt to heifers in pasture;
- Worm at least one time per year, preferably twice;
- Consult with a veterinarian on a vaccination program; and

Apply for anterless license starting Oct. 4

HARRISBURG — Antlerless deer license applications will be accepted from Pennsylvania resident hunters beginning Monday, Oct. 4. Antlerless deer licenses are issued by county treasurers, and, according to law, "shall be issued without restriciton or regard to the county residence of the Pennsylvania applicant."

When applying for an anterless license, the hunter must mail the antlerless application to the county treasurer. The lone exceptions will be for applications to hunt antlerless deer in Potter and Elk Counties.

Persons requesting antlerless licenses are reminded:

—Only the original antlerless deer license application form issued with the hunter's license shall be valid for making application.

—No person is permitted to apply for more than one antlerless deer license under any circumstances.

—The application cannot be transferred by the person receiving it or used by any other person to apply for a license.

—County treasurers may accept applications by standard first class mail delivered through and by the U.S. Postal Service beginning Monday, Oct. 4.

—Applications must conform to the following regulations: The form must be legibly completed in its entirety in accordance with printed instructions.

—The application (s) must be mailed only in the official yellow envelope.

—Not more than three applications may be submitted per envelope.

—The appropriate pre-printed number on the outside of the envelope, indicating the number of applications enclosed, must be circled in ink.

—The first and last name and legal home address of any one of the applicants must be printed on the front top left corner of the envelope.

—The green "return" envelope, with first class postage affixed, and self-addressed to any one of the applicants, must be enclosed with the application (s).

—Remittance, at $3.35 for each application, must be in the form of a negotiable check or money order payable to "County Treasurer" (payable to "Pa. Game Commission" for Potter and Elk County antlerless licenses).

—When more than one application is mailed in the same envelope, if any one of the applications fails to comply with regulations, all applications will be rejected.

—Applications rejected for failure to enclose the self-addressed, stamped green envelope will be put in a "dead letter" file and may be reclaimed only by contacting the country treasurer.

Antlerless licenses will not be issued by country treasurers before Oct. 13. All licenses will be mailed to successful applicants no later than Nov. 12 a county treasurer may elect to conduct a public drawing Oct. 6 to select antlerless license recipients. County treasurers are to return all unsuccessful applications at the earliest possible date, but in any event no later than Friday, Oct. 15, so the applicant may re-apply to another county where licenses are still available.

—Any hunter whose application has been returned may change the country designation where he or she wishes to hunt and re-apply there if unsold licenses are still available.

Purina Hi Octane Hog Chow

Kleen Leen Checker™ Boars and Gilts

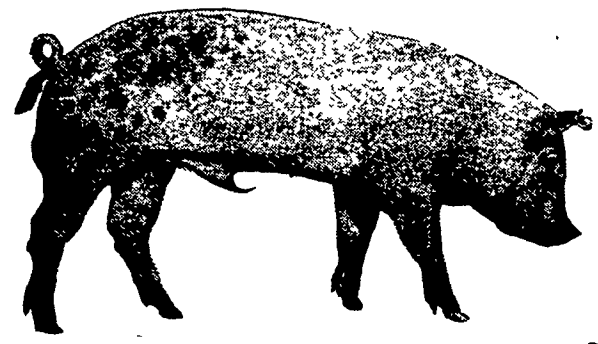
MORE INCOME POTENTIAL

It takes more to make money in the hog business these days. More genetic potential, better feeding programs, and more in the way of smart management. Discover how Purina and Kleen Leen can improve your hog income through faster daily gains, larger litters, improved feed conversions and better carcass quality.

MORE HEALTH

Regardless of which Checker™ Boar or Gilt you select, you'll receive the benefit of the Kleen Leen Health Program, the most complete program of its kind.

It helps assure that animals will arrive on your farm free of specified infectious diseases. We have enough confidence in it to offer the strongest written warranty in the industry today.



MORE GENETIC CHOICES

What specific traits would you like to improve? Kleen Leen offers 7 different breeds of Checker™ brand boars to strengthen different specific traits. Use them in combination with high performance Checker™ brand gilts for a double dose of genetic improvement. Kleen Leen's exclusive genetic potential rating (G.P.R.®) system accurately measures the heritable traits that affect your income. Because it evaluates true genetic potential before you buy, it lets you purchase the Checker™ Boar that's the best value for you. Checker™ Boars are available in 7 different G.P.R.® levels ranging from 80 to 140 G.P.R. points. Even the lowest level is capable of improving nearly any herd in the nation.

MORE KNOW-HOW AND COMMITMENT

A little more than 70 years ago, Purina began providing specialized products, total management programs and professional guidance for hog producers. Today, Purina is the only national feed company which offers hog cow rations, health products, Kleen Leen breeding stock, and professional expertise in research, nutrition, management, marketing and sanitation.

Your dealer can help you with more phases of your hog operation than anyone else.

It all adds up to an unequalled commitment to your success using the tremendous combined resources of Purina and Kleen Leen.

Look at the performance records that Dan & Amy Buttorff of New Park, Pa. have seen using the Purina Hi-Octane Hog Chow program and Kleen Leen Checker™ Boars and Gilts
